Pearson Resigns, Rejects New Post With University

He Obeys 'Command' of Maryland Regents to Quit as Head.

Stipulates Ouster Be Effective Today

Sends Curt Letter in Refusing Tender of Consultancy.

By Clyde Du Bose,
A Staff Correspondent.

College Park, Md., June 30.—The president of the University of Maryland, Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, resigned late this afternoon.

His resignation takes effect at noon tomorrow, the hour when a State board of regents ultimatum asking him to resign would have expired.

Announcing his resignation from his Hyattsville home, the 62-year-old educator and specialist in agricultural science was most emphatic. He flatly rejected an invitation from the board to continue as "adviser on land grant college matters," which would have been a brand-new post.

He said specifically that he was resigining "in reply to the command from the State board of regents and the State board of agriculture."

Start of Controversy.

Thus ended a spirited duel waged in public for the last two months ever since the resignation of the head of the modern languages department, Dr. A. E. Zucker, precipitated a regents' board investigation of charges that the university had "deteriorated" during President Pearson's nine years of service.

Secret questioning of the university's deans and department heads and an outspoken defense of the president's rule by Gov. Harry W. Nice marked the inquiry.

Repeatedly the president had asserted that "from published reports it appears there is no charge against the president as to his character of efficiency," pointing out that the university had suffered a 40 per cent cut in its State appropriation.

The reasons for the board's request last Friday for his resignation have not been made public.

Tomorrow, H. C. Byrd, the university's vice president, former football coach and now director of athletics, is scheduled to become acting president. He has been connected with the school for 11 years.

Radcliffe Not Candidate.

It is understood that Byrd could have the appointment as president, if he desired it, but he is regarded as preferring to retain his present position.

The name of Senator George L. Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, was brought up immediately on the university campus as that of a likely choice.

Radcliffe, an almnus of the university's law school, reached at his Baltimore home tonight, laughed, however, and said he had never heard of the report before.

"Why, I wouldn't want to give up my seat in the Senate," he said. "You know I was only elected last fall. I wouldn't want to give up my business. It's completely out of my line."

Members of the board of regents said the question of a successor to President Pearson had not been discussed at any board meeting yet.

Dr. Pearson's Letter.

Dr. Pearson said his only plans personally called for "a long rest."

Dr. Pearson came to the university presidency in 1926 from the presidency of the Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts.

Indiana-born, he had specialized in agricultural science. He was New York State commissioner of agriculture from 1908 to 1912, when he took the Iowa College post, and during the war, from August, 1917, to 1918, he served as assistant secretary of agriculture.

He announced his resignation in the following letter to the chairman of the board of regents, dated July 1:

"In reply to the command from the State board of regents and the State board of agriculture, I hereby submit my resignation as president of the University of Maryland and

Tungchow, Mission Center, Under Martial Law in Hunt for Mutineers.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, China, June 30.—Martial law was proclamied today at Tungchow, 15 miles east of Peiping, upon reports that mutineers against the Chinese army had taken refuge there

Police re-enforcements were sent to Tungchow, where a score of missionaries of the American Board Mission and the mission's school are located.

In Peiping, guards were further strengthened at strategic points, following an attack on the city by rebels Friday. Gates of the city were closed between 9 p. m. and 6 a. m. and streets were deserted.

A reward of 20,000 silver dollars for the capture alive of Gen. Pai Chien-Wu, former chief of staff of a northern Chinese army, who is accused of leading the revolt, was offered by Chinese authorities. They also will pay 10,000 silver dollars for his body.

Vernacular newspapers said five mutineers were captured Saturday, carrying two five-barred flags, used in the pre-nationalistic regime, and a number of arm bands bearing the characters: "Justice, Autonomy, Army."

Authorities gave 20,000 silver dollars for distribution among loyal soldiers and police in appreciation of their work in defending the city.

Chinese circles viewed with relief the departure for Manchukuo of Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, Japan's "Lawrence of Manchukuo," who has been here since shortly after the Sino-Japanese crisis arose.

Mrs. Vidal Reported Set to Wed D.C.Man

By the Associated Press.

Reno, Nev., June 30.—Mrs. Mina Gore Vidal, who will be eligible this week to file suit for divorce from Eugene Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, was reported today to be planning to marry Hugh D. Auchincloss, Washington investment banker.

Neither Mrs. Vidal, the daughter of Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma, nor Auchincloss, could be reached for comment, but a reliable source said they would be married soon after her expected divorce is granted.

Captive Tells How He Slew Hughes' Kin

Detroit Suspect Admits Fight With Dickinson on Gay Party.

Says Lawyer Pulled Gun When He Scented Holdup Plot.

By Grace Robinson,
A Special Correspondent.

Detroit, June 30.—In the rambling, evasive confession of a killing, obtained by police shortly before dawn today, from the notorious former convict and white slaver, William Schweitzer, the death of Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney, emerges plainly as the sordid slaying of a man for his money.

The nephew of the Chief Justice of the United States, Charles Evans Hughes, Dickinson had come to Detroit on an errand for his law firm—and was slain with his own gun, in a scuffle following a party, Schweitzer declared.

According to the version forced bit by bit from Schweitzer's loosely hung lips, Dickinson wooed his own finish when he went on a party with two red-headed girls—the Jackson sister dancing team—last Tuesday night in Detroits skyscraper hostelry, the Book-Caddilac.

Chief of Detectives Fred W. Frahm, wearily recounting later in the day Schweitzer's confession, declared he fully believed the party story, although many other spots in Schweitzer's revelation of a night in the underworld are known to be untrue.

Murder Charge Preferred.

Schweitzer, behind bars at police headquarters with the Jackson sisters and their friend, Jean Miller, held in the women's quarters, faced a new grilling tonight. He is charged with murder in the first degree, which, in this State, is punishable by life imprisonment. The female trio, bedraggled from the tears and fainting fits which punctuated their long trip back here from Fort Wayne, Ind.—where all were captured yesterday—are held as material witnesses.

"I found Dickinson at my room at the Detroiter Hotel," declared Schweitzer. "The Jackson sisters and the Miller girl were with him. We got two quarts of liquor. We drank one, and most of another. Then we decided to take a ride. We thought we'd hunt up a beer garden I knew of. We went in my car. We drove west, I guess it was—I'm not clear myself.

"One of the girls tapped me on the shoulder. She said to stop—so I stopped. All three girls got out.

"Dickinson got alarmed. He said: 'Hey—what's coming off here?' I guess he thought he was in for a holdup. He pulled a gun and I heard a shot. Then I got excited. I was scared of his gun. I thought he was going to shoot me. I grabbed his gun and I shot it off twice. Then Dickinson slumped down and I saw he was dead.

Turns Attention to Body.

"I knew I shouldn't keep his body in the car. I was drunk myself, and I pulled off his coat and vest. I guess I dropped them out of the car."

The garments Schweitzer mentioned were found by police at different points, some distance from the lonely spot in Rouge Park, where the attorney's body, tossed face downward, was found early last Thursday morning.

While hardened homicide division detectives marveled at the cold-blooded recital, Schweitzer went on with his ugly story.

"Well, after the shooting I drove the girls back to their home. They lived in a rooming house near my hotel, the Detroiter. They began to cry. I says to them: 'You make me sick. You are just yellow.' I left them out and went to my hotel. I packed my stuff. A bellboy carried my bags out. I was pretty excited. I was upset—sure I was. About 2 or 2:30 a. m. I picked the girls up and we started for Chicago."

Then the 25-year-old milk trade racketeer described his flight to Chicago, and ultimately back to Fort Wayne, where they were seized on the street.

At intervals during his recital to Chief Frahm and later to County

Copyright, 1935, by The Washington Post.
This "trap" photograph taken unconsciously by the thief raiding an ice box on a Maryland porch last March led to his identification after he had been killed by a train on Friday.

Portrait Taken by Contrivance Set Up to Catch Thief at Glenn Dale Proves Victim of Train Near Huntsville Was Former Convict.

An eerie self-portrait, the most curious perhaps ever to find its way into a rogue's gallery, yesterday served to identify a man who, it once appeared, might never be identified.

The man was killed Friday by an electric train near Huntsville, Md. His clothing bore no marks of identification. There was a reason. He was a former convict and parole violator, a hunted man who walked the railroad tracks instead of the highways.

The black sheep of his family, he hoped, no doubt, to remain anonymous even in death.

But yesterday while his body lay in an undertaking establishment, somebody in the Hyattsville police department remembered a certain photograph in the rogue's gallery.

Snapped at Icebox.

It showed a lean individual in an overcoat raiding an icebox. The photograph was of the "trap" variety, snapped unconsciously by the theif himself as he reached for food on a back porch in Glenn Dale, Md.

That happened in March and the figure in the photograph was identified as Alexander Marvin Page, 37-year-old Washingtonian, who had servel 11 years in the Maryland Penitentiary for housebreaking and had broken parole.

Yesterday police looked at this photograph then at the body found along the railroad tracks and knew that the problem was solved. The dead man was Alexander Marvin Page.

Meanwhile a brother of Page appeared in Hyattsville to clinch the identification. He had read in the newspapers that in a notebook found on the man was scribbled a

Replacements Of Battleships To Start in '37

Navy to Build One a Year; 12 Destroyers and 6 Submarines Planned.

A battleship replacement program to begin in 1937 is planned by the Navy, it was learned yesterday. The plan is expected to be carried out unless a new international agreement intervenes, or if a provision for battleship replacements can be written into a new treaty.

The program tentatively calls for building one battleship a year following expiration of the London Treaty on December 31, 1936.

The ship to be built in 1937 would be the first to be constructed in the United States in 18 years and the first since signatories of the Washington Treaty agreed in 1922 to scrap certain ships and limit construction of others. With 18 years of study and added knowledge going into their construction, the new ships would be outstand-

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

Her 1933 Rattler Gets Going in Cloud of Dust and Fumes, Pointing Southward.

Maxine Davis, magazine and feature writer, has gone forth to discover the America of 1935. She will write of her discoveries for The Post. Her articles will appear three times weekly and will deal with the political and economic life of all parts of the Nation.

When I pressed the starter of my lolloping 1933 rattler, and, in a cloud of dust and carbon monoxide, started South, I knew exactly how Columbus felt when the Santa Maria weighed anchor and sailed into the unknown blue.

For I am going to discover America.

We Washingtonians live in a little ivory tower at the source of a river that waters a continent. But few of us know where it goes, what fields of grain and garden it richens. What factory wheels it turns. What catastrophe it thunders down in floods; what starvation when it shallows and dries.

Momentous engineering is going on at the fountain, where we live, changing the whole course of the river, changing the valleys through which it surges, changing the lives of the millions who live beside it.

We all know the engineers. We see the President ride by in his automobile; some of us have seen him at his desk, in supreme command.

We've listened to Gen. Johnson trenchantly phrase a new philosophy. We've borrowed cream for breakfast from our NRA neighbors in the morning before they've gone about their daily chore of remodeling American industry. And we know the nine grave gentlemen who switched on the red light in the Commerce Building.

What does all that mean to the mill owner in Carolina—the chambermaid in Memphis the paint dealer in Chicago?

We see Secretary Wallace reaching into the cotton fields and mowing down wheat. What has that done to the sweating stevedore on a Mississippi levee, or a housewife in Dodge City, Kans., on a Saturday afternoon?

We pass A. F. L. President William Green conferring about the strikes in Omaha and Toledo. Who are those strikers? How do they live? What do they want? What do they really think?

We glimpse Harry Hopkins, eyes dark-circled but tireless as a dynamo generating plans for the millions on his relief rolls and the billions for their need. But what about the men and women he and his money house and feed? What about the Ph. D. out of a job and the miner nobody can use? How are they getting along?

What has happened? Have the depression years changed the face, even the character, of America? Is the man in Florence, Ala., dependent for his job on a corporation in

Fiscal Year Starts Today With Doubts

Huge Relief Expenses Seem to Be Only Certainty.

Future of Emergency Organizations Far From Clear.

The Government's official "New Year's Day"—the first day of the new fiscal year—today finds the Administration still faced with the necessity for huge outlays for relief and recovery, with the amount of possible revenue doubtful because of pending tax legislation and with the necessity of revision of some of its recovery plans.

With re-employment still the most pressing problem, there were signs that demands for direct aid to business were falling off. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is anticipating a higher rate of repayments of its loans. The Home Owners Loan Corporation is receiving far fewer demands for assistance from distressed borrowers on mortgages and the rate of foreclosures, considered an accurate index of real estate values, is going up.

Huge Relief Problem.

On the other side of the picture is the necessity for caring for more than 20,000,000 persons still on relief, and the growing realization that the $4,000,000,000 works fund will not be adequate to do the job. Already there is talk of a huge new relief appropriation in the next session of Congress.

The year opens with considerable doubt as to the future of some of the emergency organizations. After two years of feverish activity the NRA is at a standstill, with slight indication that it can be made over into anything approaching its former place in Government and business. A shadow of doubt is cast over the constitutionality of the AAA and some of the other New Deal measures which are sure to meet strong opposition in the courts next fall.

New Deal for Labor.

The new fiscal year opens with a new deal for labor in the enactment of the Wagner labor disputes bill and the imminent passage of the Guffey coal bill. Both measures, however, are faced with powerful oppoistion, and their validity will be contested every step of the way.

The most important measure affecting the Government's fiscal policy is the Roosevelt proposal for higher rates in the upper income tax brackets, for higher inheritance taxes and for increases in taxes on large corporation incomes. Congressional action on this measure will have some bearing on the amount of this year's deficit and the ultimate size of the national debt, but money raised from these sources is not expected to be sufficient to have a very large effect on the final totals.

Sixth Year "In Red."

The new fiscal year will be the sixth during which the Government has operated "in the red." Since July 1, 1930, the accumulated deficit is about $14,500,000,000. The coming year is expected to add at least $3,500,000,000 to this figure. The official estimate is $1,000,000,000 higher, but if expenditures and collections continue as they have during the last year this figure will not be reached.

Expenditures for the new year are estimated at a new peace-time record of $8,520,413,609 and receipts at $3,991,904,639. New inheritance, income and corporation taxes may increase the latter figure.

Expenditures for the year just passed totaled about $7,300,000,000 as compared with an estimated expenditure of $8,581,069,026.

By far the largest expenditure during the new year will be for work relief. Today is the date set for beginning of active operation of the program, but the heads of the work administration find themselves so tangled in questions of policy that it is doubtful whether many more persons than those now working on FERA jobs will go to work within the next few weeks. Thus far the only group working under

Vandenberg Hits Tax Plan; Utility Test Due Today

Calls Tax Plan a 'Sop'

SENATOR VANDENBERG.

House to Vote on 'Death Sentence' Provision of Measure.

Administration's Confidence Shaken

Michigan Senator Sees Perils in Program of President.

By Felix Bruner.

After a Sunday conference and discussions of strategy, supporters of the Administration holding company bill were ready for a test in the House today on the controversial "death sentence" clause, although they were by no means sure of victory. The test will offer the strongest challenge to President Roosevelt's reform policies yet encountered in Congress.

Meantime Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, launched a vigorous attack upon the Administration's tax program.

The House will convene at 10 a. m., the earliest meeting this season, to consider as a committee of the whole the provisions of section 11, over which the controversy is raging. As the bill came from the Senate, approved by a majority of one vote, the measure provides for elimination of "unnecessary" holding companies by 1942.

President Roosevelt has put the whole force and influence of his office behind the measure as it passed the Senate. Opposing him is the powerful utility lobby, which the President has declared far exceeds any other lobby that has been encountered in Washington.

Administration Doubts.

The question before the committee of the whole House today will be that of whether the "death sentence" clause shall remain in the bill or whether it shall provide for mere regulation. Administration supporters feel that they are at a disadvantage because procedure in the committee of the whole does not call for a record vote. They believe that if members of the House could be put on record they would be more likely to support the Administration.

If the "death sentence" amendment fails in the committee of the whole, a vote could be taken after the bill reaches the House only on a motion to change the language and to send the measure back to committee.

Speculation as to what is likely to happen if the bill passes the House without the "death sentence" provision followed indications that this situation might have to be faced. The bill would go to conference, where Senate members are expected to stand firm for the measure as the President wants it. If the House conferees fail to yield it is possible the bill would never be reported out, dying in conference.

May Be 1936 Issue.

If this should happen, it is considered inevitable that the President will take the issue to the country in the 1936 campaign. Leading Democrats may seek to have a "death sentence" plank written into the party platform.

It was even hinted that the President may take a hand personally in the situation today. The issue has become one of whether or not the House Democratic majority intends to stand behind the President in his demands, which places the bill higher in the list of Administration measures even than "must" legislation.

Meanwhile, another Administration "must" measures, the tax bill, was being held up in the House Ways and Means Committee pending action on the Guffey bill and the alcohol control legislation.

Senator Vandenberg, frequently mentioned as a presidential candidate, yesterday denounced the tax plan as "a mere sop to political strategy."

"If we are to have a new tax bill, let it be a real tax bill and not a mere political appeal to mass perjudice," Vandenberg said in a formal statement.

Vandenberg said the Administration proposals "neither support the public credit by adequately overtaxing our tragically mounting deficit, nor 'redistribute wealth'

Communistic Gain Due, Says Thomas Mann

German Author, Visiting in Capital, Holds Fascism Only Alternative.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

The morning had hardly begun and yet, at 9:30 o'clock, heat surged through the city with overpowering strength. In the living room of a suite at the Mayflower a slim little man, his light blue shirt open wide at the collar, perspiration standing out on his forehead, sat wondering how any one could endure it.

"Why, it's like the tropics," said Thomas Mann, who once, in unforgettable prose, had told how, in a heat-sent plague, death had come to Venice.

Perhaps the greatest contemporary novelist, certainly the greatest to come out of Germany in this century, the author of "Death in Venice," "The Magic Mountain," and "Buddenbrooks," was sad that he had not accepted Dorothy Thompson's invitation instead of that of President Roosevelt. Then he might have been cool and comfortable in the hospitable gardens of the Sinclair Lewises in Vermont, instead of hot and uncomfortable in Washington

But hot or otherwise he was kind to his interviewer. He sat there, a slim little man with a close-clipped mustache turning gray, and let his mind run with a surprising lack of Teutonic ponderanace over such subjects as the choice between Communism and Fascism, his likes in America literature, Nietsche and Wagner, and his own books.

He spoke of the writers first, in his carefully chosen words. And, like so many other literary Europeans who come to America, the man the Nazis would have nothing of spoke with high enthusiasm of Ernest Hemingway.

"I prefer Hemingway," he said. "I have admiration for the great talent displayed in 'Farewell to Arms' which, as you read it, always becomes better 'til the end. And then there is——"

"Dom Passos," said Frau Mann, who hovered nearby.

"Ah yes, Dos Passos, and Sinclair Lewis. And, do you know, we have just met Dorothy Thompson, who is so very intelligent and sympathetic?"

Like Thomas Mann, the reportorial wife of the author of "Main Street" and "Work of Art," has achieved the almost enviable dis-

S. Bonsal White Kills Himself; Known in Hunt, Society Circles

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., June 30.—Stephen Bonsal White, 44, member of a prominent Maryland family and widely known in society and the hunting sets of Virginia and Maryland, killed himself on the lawn of his home here early today by shooting himself in the mouth with a shotgun.

White lived with his father, Miles White, jr., at 4603 Kerway, Homeland, exclusive residential section. A police coroner gave a certificate of suicide. A few yards away asleep in the White home, were Mrs. Louise Dawson White, Stephen Bonsal White's wife, and their two children, S. Bonsal White, jr., and Miles White, 3rd. Members of the family were not aroused by the shot.

White's body was found by a friend, John R. Santos, a mechanical engineer, with whom White had spent the early hours of last night. Santos told police that White appeared to be distressed when he left him shortly after midnight. Santos quoted White as saying "When you see me next I'll be dead."

Santos said he was worried over the remark and that at 5 a. m. today he left his home and went to the White home. He said he found White lying on the lawn with the shotgun nearby.

White was a native of Baltimore, but spent considerable time at Middleburg and other Virginia towns. Mrs. White collapsed when told of the death of her husband. Members of the family were unable to ascribe a reason for the act.

Sales Tax Nets $17,413,090.

Mexican State Allows Return Of Exiled Priests, Paper Says

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, June 30.—The newspaper El Dia reported today that the Governor of Colima had issued a decree permitting 20 priests of each religion to return to that state and officiate in churches.

Colima was one of more than 12 states that barred all priests at the height of the Red church agitation several months ago.

The same newspaper says 41 Redshirts, indicted in the killing of five Catholics in Coyoacan last December, will be brought back for trial. The Redshirts left for Tabasco two weeks ago, following the resignation of Garrido Canabal as secretary of agriculture.

Neither of today's reports was officially confirmed.

The department of the interior announced that numerous exiles are applying for permission to return to the country, especially from California and Texas. Dispatches from Ciudad Juarez announce that Gilberto Valenzuela, candidate for president in the last election, has been granted permission to return. He is planning to leave El Paso immediately.

Today's published report followed earlier predictions in unofficial sources that the government plans a general relaxation of its policies toward political enemies and toward the Catholic Church.

It was understood that the government, while not abandoning its socialistic education program, would allow private schools to reopen without the restrictions that had been placed on them before the recent clash between former President Plutarco Elias Calles and President Lazaro Cardenas, in which Cardenas emerged victorious.

Holding Firms Showdown Due On 'Hill' Today

House to Vote on 'Death Sentence' Provision in Measure.

"Fortunately," he continued, "a flash of recurrent sanity interrupted the original program which certainly implied a purpose to rewrite the basic tax laws of the Republic in 72 hours."

The Senator said that because he believed the rate of "public spending and public waste" now going on leads ultimately to inflation or increased taxes he would support as an alterantive to inflation a new tax program "provided it is real and adequate and effective."

In this connection he listed these five principles:

"That rational economy must again dedicate itself to the pursuit of a balanced budget as speedily as possible, because it will be only an added and final dissipation of the resources of our citizens if new tax revenues are poured into a bottomless well of incontinent spending. It will do no good to refill the barrel if the bung-hole remains wide open.

Menaces to Business.

"With a recurrent dedication to a balanced budget—a dedication which, for a change, means what it says—the new tax program should raise enough money to do the job and not merely flirt with it. This manifestly means that the income tax base must be broadened because all the incomes of all 'the rich' will not suffice to pay our mounting deficit. We must get the money. Inevitably millions of our citizens must contribute, each in proportion to his ability to pay. Incidentally, when this happens—and citizens realize that there is no Santa Claus—the popularity of loose public spending will suffer a desirable setback.

"The tax program must be practical. I do not believe in using income taxes for social objectives. But I do believe in using inheritance taxes for social objectives. Nevertheless, we must be sure we do not destroy wealth in our efforts to redistribute it. There is a point beyond which the break-up of a large fortune may spell the break-up of the industry which produced it. There is no useful social objective in such a result if it adversely affects thousands of related employes.

Hits Tax-Exempt Bonds.

"Corporation taxes are business taxes. Convalescent private business is our hope for the future. Business must take its share of this burden, but it must not be driven to discouragement and despair. At the moment it may be better to emphasize taxation upon the individual after the earnings of business have been distributed to him.

"Finally, any such program must include the elimination of tax-exempt bond privileges because there never can be an equitable distribution of the tax burden so long as these exemptions open the back door for escape."

Another blast at the proposed corporation tax provision came from the National Association of Manufacturers, which declared it "unsound from whatever aspect it is considered."

Pointing out that as an income producing measure the proposal is inadequate, the manufacturers' statement continued:

"It is admittedly a proposal designed to facilitate redistribution of wealth; it is, in other words, a reform measure and not a tax measure. By adding new tax burdens, by proposing unsettlement of relationships between corporations and their stockholders, it is, in fact, an anti-recovery measure."

Corporation Ownership.

The statement declared that corporations are not simply large pools of wealth but they are owned by great masses of individuals. The average individual investment in corporations is $2,700, with millions owning less, the statement said.

"It is an attack," the statement concluded, "upon the welfare of millions of consumers and upon millions of thrifty people who have invested their savings in our business corporations."

Following action on the ship subsidy bill, which has been passed by the House, the Senate will turn to the AAA amendments. They will be reported from the Agriculture Committee in a form designed to meet constitutional objections.

The American Liberty League, however, said in its weekly statement that the amendments are a "dishonest" and "futile" attempt to avoid a court test of constitutionality of the AAA.

"Agriculture has too much regimentation," the league said. "There is need for a curtailment of the authority of the AAA rather than for expanded powers.

"Admission AAA Invalid."

"In effect the bill conveys an admission that the entire AAA structure is unconstitutional. The passage of further legislation should properly await decisions by the Supreme Court on the validity of the present law.

Constitutionality of still another Administration measure, the banking bill, was challenged by representatives of five national farm organizations.

"To make the banking act of 1935 constitutional," the statement said, "there must be written into it a mandate clearly defining the limits within which the Federal Reserve Board may exercise the powers which the Congress, by this bill, delegates to the board to regulate the value of the dollar."

The statement was signed by the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the National Cooperative Council, the National Cooperative Milk Producers' Federation and the Farmers National Grain Corporation.

Between You and Me

Behind the Scenes of Utility Set-to—Hot Words on Lobbies Inconsistent.

By Raymond Clapper

Financiers and stock-selling promoters who took control of the utilities industry are now paying for past misdeeds. The business of supplying electricity and gas to the public was plastered over with layer upon layer of inflated stocks and bonds. The story is a long and oft-told tale. It was so raw as to shock portions of the business community which had not been involved in it.

According to figures cited by Representative Rayburn, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, to suggest one of many examples, in 1927 Electric Bond and Share received from operating companies supervised by it $9,373,172.07 in fees for performing services. The total expenses incurred by Electric Bond and Share in rendering these services was $4,403,722.17. Profit, $4,969,449.30, or 113 per cent on the money spent in one year.

Well, when you piled evidence of that sort up day after day what can you expect but a sense of public revulsion? That is what has taken place. And the reaction is so strong against it that the retribution is liable to be visited upon the innocent as well as the guilty.

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt is just a good enough judge of the popular mind to know that he can go the limit in pressing this issue and he has. He has carried such strong support with him that the utilities have been pushed down to the extremity of making a fight on just one thing.

That point is simply whether Congress shall definitely order the elimination of holding companies, subject to certain exceptions, by January 1, 1940, or whether the Securities and Exchange Commission shall be allowed to use its discretion in the matter.

It is around this point that all of the hysterical clamor is raging. Both sides are so affected by the heat that they have lost all sense of proportion. Those who oppose the "death sentence" are being threatened with political extinction. Mr. Roosevelt grows shrill over the "dangerous" utility lobby. Works patronage bait dangles overhead. Hotels are full of utility lobbyists. Every wire is being pulled by both sides.

It is hard to see where the Administration's fate is at stake in this question of a congressional death sentence versus administrative strangulation by SEC or why the utilities are so agitated unless it is that they have been pushed so far that they are calling for the second alternative like drowning men snatch at straws.

The Administration, protesting against utilities lobbying while its strong-arm men are themselves lobbying in the House, looks as inconsistent as the utilities lobby. A good many who are now urging Congress to leave the discretion with an administrative board are the very ones who, a short time ago, were lambasting Congress for delegating so much power to NRA, AAA and other executive agencies. The utilities realize they have lost their battle on the merits of the question and the strategy now is to get the power of decision thrown into a commission in the hope that in time the storm will blow over so that it will be possible to induce an appointive commission to be lenient in exercising it.

That, in substance, is the point at stake in the "death sentence" issue.

• • • •

The curious thing is why the House has so lost its sense of responsibility and courage as to run away from a record vote on the issue. Representatives who whine about executive domination are afraid to stand up and be counted. Anybody who votes for either the House or Senate bill votes to convict the utilities industry of such serious breaches of trust in the past that it must hereafter be put out on parole. When members won't stand up on a matter that after all is a detail and say whether they want to order the job done or merely tell SEC that they would like to have it done if the commission sees no objections, what kind of representative government have you?

• • • •

Sponsors of the utility legislation say that it, in either the House or Senate versions, will not prevent the continuation of investment companies, as distinguished from holding companies. What is the difference?

Walter M. W. Splawn, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission and one of the recognized authorities on the subject, distinguishes them in this way: The holding company by virtue of its ownership of securities, is in a position to control or substantially influence the management of one or more other companies. An investment company buys securities as an investor would do and without any purpose of determining the policy of the management.

• • • •

Not all holding companies would be abolished under either the House or Senate bill. Those directly owning actual operating companies in geographically contiguous territory, for instance, would continue. Investment companies, formed for the purpose of holding diversified securities so that an investor would have the benefit of a wider spread of his risk, would be permissible. The main thing which this legislation strikes at is the elaborate pyramiding whereby through a hierarchy of half a dozen or so paper companies, a small group at the top controls millions of dollars in operating companies scattered in widely separated States, each company issuing stock, or chipping out "fees" for supervision. Rayburn says it was found that one man was secretary or officer in 200 companies.

• • • •

There are strong arguments in favor of large scale business. One of the questionable features of Mr. Roosevelt's program for taxing wealth is the graduated corporation tax which is a punitive tax, not against excess profits, but against mere size. There is nothing in the utility bill that penalizes size so far as actual operating companies are concerned.

But one trouble with the growth of large scale business and one of the things which has caused so much feeling against it is that higher management has stepped in between the stockholders, that is the owners, and the property and has revelled in lucrative thimble-rigging. An effort is being made to stop this and all who believe in private enterprise are lucky that the rebellion against these practices did not take the form of a demand for Government ownership. It is one testimonial to the level-headedness of opinion in the last two or three years that it is attempting to correct the abuses by regulation instead of by Government ownership. It shows how impossible it really is to push this country into socialism.

Everyone seems to become argumentative during hot weather. A woman who regarded herself as an invincible conversationalist arrived in a group the other night and selecting a prospect flung this challenge: "Do you think there is a God? Take either side."

Tax on Wealth Like Burglary, Says Jim Reed

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Kansas City, June 30.—Missouri's fiery "Jim" Reed lashed out tonight at President Roosevelt's wealth-distributing taxing program as "open to every criticism which can be levied against the burglar or highwayman."

The Democratic former Senator compared the plan to doctrines of the Soviet government, charged it is "violative of the principles of the Declaration of Independence," and asserted economic chaos would result if the program should become effective.

He predicted the proposal and its supporters would be repudiated.

"I think," the 73-year-old veteran of many a heated political campaign declared, "that there is enough common honesty and common sense among the American people to repudiate the doctrine and to repudiate its authors."

Cites Soviet as Example.

"It is inconceivable," said the white-haired Missourian, pacing the thick carpet in his law office, "that any honest man, in his right mind, would propose, by force, to despoil a citizen of the property he has honestly acquired. The doctrine might be entertained in Russia, and indeed Russia is the chief exponent of this species of robbery.

"So much for the moral aspects. The economic effects will undoubtedly be disastrous, and in the end the suffering will be chiefly visited upon the laboring classes and small investors."

With a wry smile, he said "It is the fashion to talk about vast aggregations of capital and to prate about redistributing capital," adding:

"The fact is that in nearly every instance the capital is already distributed to many thousands of people. These great institutions have stockholders and bondholders innumerable. These stocks and bonds have been invested in literally by millions of people.

"Smash the big organization and you destroy or injure all of these investors."

Envisions "Calamity."

Reed envisioned a "calamity" if insurance companies were affected. He said:

"Destroy these companies and you will wipe out the deposits made by myriads of people who have sought to provide for their families and dependents after death. The effect of such a calamity would be worse than a disastrous war.

"I have always been in favor of a graduated income tax which imposed upon large incomes a greater percentage than on the smaller incomes. But no tax is justifiable except for the support of the Government.

"A tax levied for the purpose of taking money from one class of citizens—for the purpose of transferring that money directly or indirectly to another class of citizens is, to employ the language of Mr. Justice Harlan, none the less robbery becausce done under the forms of law.

"It must be remembered that once we start upon the road of swatting the rich the question will at once arise, who are the rich?

"And the principle can easily be extended if we are to distribute the wealth so that no man will be allowed property of any value. We have no more right to divide the property of the rich, either in morals or in law, than we have to divide the property of men of moderate means, and, going further, to divide all property."

Congress Next Arena of Action In Coal Muddle

Strike Off Another Month, Fight Now Centers on Guffey Bill.

By the Associated Press.

Congressional action on the Guffey stabilization bill is the next move in the muddled soft coal situation.

The threatened strike was off for another month. Belated Government intervention led John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, to give the producers another 30 days to meet his demand for a 30-hour week and a 10 per cent increase in pay. The operators have not yet formally accepted Lewis' offer to extend present wages and hours through July 31, but coal men predicted they would without doubt. The producers had offered to renew present wages and hours until next April 1.

How enactment of the Guffey bill, to create a "little NRA" for the bituminous industry, would affect the situation was anybody's guess. The United Mine Workers wrote and vigorously support the measure. They claim it would stop price-warfare and permit operators to pay the wages they ask.

One large group of producers has joined the union in supporting the bill. Another group, mostly Southern, says the bill would put the industry in a Federal "strait-jacket," raise coal prices to the point of losing business to competitive fuels and result in increased unemployment.

These opponents expect to test the measure's constitutionality as soon as opportunity offers.

The bill now is being considered by a Ways and Means sub-committee. Chairman Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), Washington, said it likely would reach the House floor sometime this week. Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, said he would call up the bill as soon as the House approved it. The measure is on President Roosevelt's "must" list of legislation.

Treasure Hunt Renewed.

Brest, June 30 (U.P.).—The Italian salvage ship Artiglio today resumed its five-year search for gold and silver treasures in the British steamer Egypt, which sank near Brittany in 1922. The Artiglio already has recovered most of the $5,000,000 treasure. It will attempt to find the 35 gold bars, 30 silver ingots and 15,000 pounds sterling in gold coins still under 100 feet of water.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

A rigid agreement that TVA critics shall dominate the House group that helps write the final draft of the Administration's Tennessee Valley bill yesterday was disclosed to have been clamped on House leaders before even a compromise measure would be brought to the floor.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Military Committee, said when questioned that this agreement was another of the sweeping concessions granted to smash a month's deadlock and bring some form of TVA bill to a vote.

The Senate has passed a TVA bill approved by the White House. When the House has acted on its compromise, the two measures will be sent to conference for an adjustment of differences with a Senate delegation. Here are the Representatives designated to go to that conference which puts the legislation in its final form:

McSwain, Hill (Democrat), Alabama; Monett (Democrat), Louisiana; Plumley (Republican), Vermont, and McLean (Republican), New Jersey.

Three Among Committee Foes.

The last three were among committeee TVA foes who succeeded in tabling by a 13-to-12 votes the Senate TVA bill.

Later the committee, by another 13-to-12 vote, approved a drastically altered compromise bill, which has met blunt White House criticism.

The Rules Committee has given the TVA measure right of way on the floor after action on the pending utilities bill.

Administration leaders were planning a floor fight to restore language more acceptable to the President, but the outcome was doubtful.

Military Committee opponents of TVA were reported to have forced the agreement on conferees because they believed the Senate Conference Committee might succeed in liberalizing the legislation. They were reported especially wary of Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, co-author of the original TVA act and of the Senate approved amendments, who was slated to be a Senate conferee.

It requires a majority on each committee to approve any conference action. A three-man majority on the House group could block a proposal by the complete Senate Conference Committee of five joined by the other two Representatives.

McSwain said the only way in which a preponderance of conferees friendly to the TVA project could be named now was by discarding the pact "by all interested parties." But he said he saw no prospects for such a change.

It will be up to McSwain to suggest the conferees to Speaker Byrns.

Questioned about the agreement, Byrns said:

"It is an unbroken rule that the Speaker appoints the conferees suggested to him by the chairman of the committee that reports a bill.

Must Obey Precedent, He Says.

"I don't know what names will be suggested to me, but I feel that I shall have to follow the unbroken precedent."

Byrns added, however, that a majority of the House can instruct the conferees as to what amendments must be insisted upon.

These are major points in the compromise bill to which President Roosevelt was reported opposed;

Retention of the present $50,000,000 limit on TVA bond issues, a provision forbidding TVA to sell power and agricultural chemicals below costs of production after January 1, 1937, another barring TVA construction of power lines substantially parallel to existing lines, and a requirement that TVA be placed under strict accounting procedure of the General Accounting Office.

Methodist Board Rakes Repealists

Not One Promise Kept, Prohibitionists Say.

By the Associated Press.

The Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church said in a statement yesterday that "not one single promise of the proponents of repeal has been redeemed and nothing is being done which gives any reasonable expectation that any of these promises will be redeemed."

"Bootlegging is not stopped, possibly is not even diminished," the statement said. "Dry territory is not yet protected, but is subjected to a drum-fire of propaganda to destroy its laws. Poison liquor still appears in the headlines of the press."

U. S. Rabbis Delay Vote on War Ban

Rally to Act Next Year on Refusal to Fight.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 30.—The central conference of American rabbis today postponed until next year consideration of a committee-approved resolution which would "recommend to all Jews" the refusal to bear arms in time of war.

The resolution, signed by five of seven members of a president's committee appointed to study the matter, will "be given thought" by 300 rabbis of reformed churches in 275 cities before the next congress.

Concurring in the resolution which "opposes war" were Chairman Max C. Currick, of Erie, Pa., and Rabbis James G. Heller, Cincinnati; Barnett R. Brickner, Cleveland; Philip R. Bernstein, Rochester, N. Y., and Victor Eppstein, Scranton, Pa.

Dr. David Philipson, dean of American rabbis, and Rabbi Julian Morgenstern, both of Cincinnati, did not sign the report, which was presented to the general conference.

The report declared the time had come for a change "in the traditional attitude of our faith toward war."

Doubts Attend Starting Today Of Fiscal Year

the new program are the CCC men, and their number still is far from the anticipated goal of 600,000.

Approximately half the works money is expected to be expended under a plan exactly like the old PWA. A total of 3,500,000 men are to be put to work. Of these 2,500,000 already are working. Hereafter most of them will receive checks signed by the works administration instead of by the FERA.

PWA probably will play a diminishing part in the program. Otherwise, activity will continue much as it has in the past, only with a change in terminology. An announcement of the changed policy, which will result in curtailment of the elaborate machinery set up for the original works program, is expected soon.

The new fiscal year finds NRA struggling with the problem of its future. An announcement of policy is expected this week. It is expected to involve a co-operative plan whereby the NRA and the Federal Trade Commission will work together on voluntary agreements. No elaborate program is expected to be undertaken, however, without additional lgislation. President Roosevelt has indicated that legislative proposals have not gone beyond the study stage. Proposals have come from the American Federation of Labor, from business groups and they are being studied by NRA officials.

The Wagner labor disputes law is expected to begin operation almost immediately. President Roosevelt is expected within the next few days to name a labor board which will have charge of its enforcement. Friends of the measure feel that it will result in labor more than regaining the ground it lost when the NRA codes were scrapped.

4th Man Dies As Probe Opens In Blast Here

Mystery Veils Cause of Transformer Explosion at Power Plant.

While a corps of electrical engineers, aided by homicide squad detectives and the District Coroner's Office, yesterday sought to determine the cause of Saturday's transformer blast at the Potomac Electric Power Co., another worker injured in the accident died in Emergency Hospital, bringing fatalities to four.

Badly burned and unconscious since the explosion, Floyd Bennett, colored, 31, of 4226 Dix street northeast, succumbed early yesterday. He was employed by Skinker, Garrett & Co., sub-contractors, and was among a crew of workmen testing the transformer when it exploded.

Little Results.

Melvin C. Sharpe, vice president of the Power Co., said yesterday that a preliminary investigation of the blast had disclosed little.

"We know no more now than we did a few moments after the accident," he declared. "Examination of the transformer revealed no cause for the explosion. Further investigation will be made by our engineers and members of the District Electric Department."

He said that the entire transformer would be taken apart and tested. Indications are, it was reported, that flaming oil and not the explosion itself brought death and injury to the workers.

The transformer had been newly installed in a sub-basement of the power company and was being tested when the blast occurred.

Those killed almost instantly were Thomas Basil Sheppard, 33, of 3054 Vista street northeast, and Fred L. Davis, 29, of East Riverdale, Md., employes of the company. William H. Wright, 39, of Clarendon, Va., died a few hours later in Emergency Hospital.

John W. Foxwell, 52, of Mount Rainier, Md., is still in a serious condition in the hospital. Physicians hold little hope for his recovery.

Three others were treated and sent home.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald indicated last night he would withhold death certificates pending a complete investigation.

300,000 in Japan Flee New Floods

Death Toll 83; More Feared as Rivers Swell Again.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, June 30.—Flood waters in western Japan attacked on a new front today when the river Chikugo in Fukuoka Prefecture, swollen by 60 hours of rain, raced through the city of Kurume and neighboring villages, inundating 60,000 homes and buildings.

An estimated 300,000 persons were forced to flee their houses or take refuge on roofs or in upper stories. Because ample warnings had been given, it was believed the casualties were slight.

The total of known dead in the two days during which floods and winds attacked the industrial heart of the empire was 83. Fresh floods swept North Kyushu Prefecture today. There was not report of casualties from Kurume and its was feared the list of victims would grow.

Jackie Coogan Leaves Process Servers Flat

San Pedro, Calif., June 30 (AP).—Jackie Coogan, film actor, was New York bound today aboard the liner Santa Rosa with members of his family, leaving behind process servers who sought in vain to serve him with subpenas in two damage suits aggregating $250,000.

The damage suits grew out of a motor car accident in San Diego County several weeks ago in which Coogan's father, his best friend, Trent (Junior) Durkin, and two other men were killed and young Coogan injured.

Coogan evaded the process servers at his home and slipped aboard the liner by the side port entrance.

Suspect Questioned in the Dickinson Slaying

Racketeer Tells Story of Death Dickinson Met

Detroit Detectives Wring Shifty Account From Former Convict.

Attorney Duncan C. McCrea. Schweitzer attacked the robbery theory in Dickinson's death, which apparently had been substantiated by the fact that the victim's body, when found, was minus his wallet and its $250.

Denies He Took Money.

"Chief, I want you to understand this wasn't a robbery. I didn't take any money. I was simply drunk and didn't know what it was all about." That was the refrain recurring throughout Schweitzer's narrative.

Today police turned their attention to the search for the .38-caliber Colt revolver, which discharged bullets into the brain and chest of the attorney. They are trying to ascertain whether Dickinson was known to carry a weapon and particularly whether he had one when he came to Detroit.

They also are seeking to trace the money or its disposition. So far they have no evidence of money spent, except that Schweitzer and the girls, when brought into headquarters early this morning, were all attired in fresh, new summer clothes. In addition, Schweitzer had two new-looking suitcases of inferior quality, but packed with new-looking garments.

The meeting with Schweitzer in the fashionable hotel was related in detail by the three girls between spasms of crying.

"We'd known Bill (Schweitzer) only a month," said Bobbie Jackson, who had been living with the married Schweitzer.

Their Meeting Described.

"Last Tuesday evening, this man (Schweitzer) asked us to dine at the Venetian room. We knew him as Will Hoffman. He took me and my sister both and we ate at 8 o'clock. We had just about finished dinner when Mr. Dickinson stepped over and asked could he buy a drink.

"We said 'yes, we didn't mind if he did.' So then we had two drinks all around."

At this point Schweitzer's story continues the narration.

"I went back to my room at the Detroiter and waited for a call. The girls went to Dickinson's room in the Book-Cadillac.

"Then the girls and Dickinson went to a Cass avenue restaurant, the Shanghai. From there they called me, and I went there in my car. We had one little beer—that was all. Then I took Dickinson back to his hotel.

"That night the girls and I slept at my hotel, the Detroiter."

As Schweitzer went on with his tale, the import of this Tuesday evening date became apparent. The victim was being prepared for his downfall in true underworld fashion. He might have gone out that night—but things weren't quite right. He was known to be a "big shot" attorney—Andrew Smygen, the taxi driver who will be one of the principal witnesses against Schweitzer, said Schweitzer told him so, when making tentative arrangements for Smygen to do the taxicab work for the crowd the following night.

Jackson Girls on Hand.

"When I got home," Schweitzer narrated, "I found the two Jackson girls in my room. Jean Miller was with them—and Dickinson. They got two quarts of liquor and started drinking. Pretty soon we went out on the ride."

Schweitzer didn't immediately give a clear-cut picture of the killing. First he told the same story that saved him after he'd shot and killed Albert Burke. At that time he claimed self-defense in a drunken brawl and he was acquitted after only 15 minutes of deliberation. Schweitzer, familiar with the law on self-defense from his earlier courtroom experience, at first asserted Dickinson drew his gun declaring that he was going to commit suicide.

"I wrestled with him," whined the former convict. "I tried to stop him. I didn't want to see him die. In the scuffle I grabbed the gun and he started to attack me and it went off and he dropped."

Sneers From Detectives.

When detectives sneered at this, Schweitzer hesitated, and after a time, told another version:

"It was in self defense, pure and simple. Dickinson and I were having a crap game in the car. We were playing for quarters. He thought I cheated. He got wild—pulled his gun—I grabbed it, and without knowing what I was doing, fired to protect myself."

Only after several more hours of persistent verbal pounding, did Schweitzer come through with his final version.

Records at the Book-Cadillac in part bear out Schweitzer's account of the "pick-up" in the Venetian room. A Spanish waiter who served Dickinson Tuesday night remembered it. Dickinson's check, which he signed, shows that he had a whisky sour before his dinner, drank a high ball with his food and afterward paid for three brandies. The second round mentioned by Schweitzer doesn't show on the record.

Schweitzer was evasive on some parts of his own and his girl's frantic flight from the crime in Schweitzer's black sedan. "We go to Chicago," said Schweitzer. "We rented an apartment. We began to buy the newspapers. They were full of the Dickinson case.

Girls Get Warning.

"I say to the girls: 'It's pretty hot. We better split. You kids keep your mouths shut. Don't say anything to anybody.'

"The girls get on a bus for Fort Wayne. I got in my car and drove 300 miles farther west—but half way I left my car—left it on the highway 150 miles out of Chicago. I hit Chicago hitch hiked. Finally I got to Fort Wayne."

Police declared this part of Schweitzer's story is false. They point out he arrived at Fort Wayne an hour and a half after the girls got there, going directly from Chicago by bus. Officials assert Schweitzer is trying to throw them off the track to prevent their locating his abandoned car with its probable bloodstains.

Late today the county attorney resumed the grilling of Schweitzer, hammering at him for nearly two hours. Schweitzer, refreshed after several hours of sleep, had taken on fresh defiance and started denying the last story he told Chief Frahm, just before dawn.

This afternoon Schweitzer reverted vigorously to his flighty yarn about Dickinson having become despondent from drinking and attempting to commit suicide. He rambled off into other variations and the county attorney turned to grilling the three girls.

name and address. The name was not his, but the address was.

He looked at the corpse and identified it as that of his brother.

After Page had served a little over 11 years of two six-year sentences for housebreaking, he was paroled fro mthe Maryland Penitentiary. This meant that he had to report periodically at the penitentiary for the period of his parole.

He failed to report after February 27 and a police "lookout" was broadcast for him.

In March, Edward M. Woods, of Glenn Dale, found his house was being robbed with exasperating frequency. The thief was particularly attracted to the ice box on the back porch.

Horn in Hook-Up.

Woods rigged a contrivance which he hoped would catch the thief. It was so arranged that the handle of the refrigerator, when disturbed at night, would touch off a flashlight and snap the lens of a camera which had been synchronized. Also he arranged to have the thief unconsciously sound a horn.

Damning Picture.

A few nights later, the horn sounded. The thief escaped, but he left behind him something even more damning than a calling card. He left his photograph.

When this was identified by police, the hunt for Page was intensified. Now he was wanted not only for violating his parole, but also for another charge of burglary.

He was reported seen several times, and always those who had seen him told police he was walking the railroad tracks.

Then Friday, while he trudged along the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis tracks near Huntsville, a train rushed upon him in the darkness and ended his flight.

ing in armament, gun range and speed.

The new program will not entail any increase in naval strength beyond that provided by the London pact. In 1937 seven American battleships will be over 20 years old, the useful age ascribed to warships in the treaty. Under present limitations the total number of battleships allowed the United States is 15. This number will be maintained.

The Navy may take its plans to the Budget Bureau this fall when the bureau will, begin to consider estimates for the new fiscal year beginning one year from today.

Besides one battleship of 35,000 tons, the building program may include 12 destroyers of 1,500 tons each, and 6 submarines. All of these ships would be replacements. All the destroyers and submarines to be replaced already are over age, and new construction will simply keep this country up to treaty levels.

By the Associated Press.

Flemington, N. J., June 30.—Four center sections of the grandstand at Jaeger's new velodrome collapsed today as bicycle races were about to start, throwing 100 to 200 persons to the ground.

Corporal Charles Pfeiffer, of the State police, said about 12 persons were injured, none seriously. Dr. G. B. Tompkins, of Flemington, said he treated six persons for minor bruises.

Pfeiffer and Trooper John Lea, both present when the stands buckled, said injured persons were taken to the homes of nearby physicians.

Among those who went down with the structure was Harry O. McCrea, warden of the Hunterdon County Jail where Bruno Richard Hauptmann was confined before and during his trial for the Lindbergh baby slaying. One of the officials at the event was C. Lloyd Fisher, one of Hauptmann's defense attorneys.

Officials of the track said they could not account for the accident, since the stands had been built recently.

Among those who received medical attention were William Bodine, Glendon Horn and Charles Burkitt, all of Flemington.

Child's Slayer, 19, Guarded From Mob

Youth Recovering After 3 Attempts to Kill Self.

By the United Press.

Greenville, N. Y., June 30.—Lynching threats tonight continued to sweep this normally peaceful countryside as officials prepared for the arraignment on murder charges Tuesday of 19-year-old Alfred Volckmann, confessed "attack slayer" of pretty Helen Glenn, 9.

Volckmann, who confessed he killed the little daughter of a Methodist minister, remained today in a Catskill hospital. He is recovering from poison he swallowed in three attempts to take his own life.

Peace officials feared demonstrations by town-folk. Two State troopers stood guard over Volckmann's hospital room. The youth will be guarded closely by armed attendants when he is brought here for arraignment tomorrow from Catskill.

Volckmann's father was confident, meanwhile, that his son did not commit the crime.

3,000 Fishermen Ready For Bass Season Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 30.—Several thousand fishermen are prepared to take to the Potomac River and its tributaries tomorrow morning at opening of the bass fishing season. Despite a heavy rain yesterday afternoon, the Potomac River, Conococheague Creek and smaller bass streams were reported in excellent condition.

More than 3,000 fishing licenses had been sold and prospects of good fishing were excellent because of absence of floods last spring, the first time the Potomac River has escaped extreme high water in several years. Thousands of bass have been placed in the river and its tributaries by the Izaak Walton League.

Steel Output In Half Year Is Behind 1934

Six-Month Average of 46% Capacity Is 1 Point Lower.

Cleveland, June 30.—Steel production for 1935 crosses the year's half-way mark today with a record slightly below that of the comparable period in 1934, states the magazine Steel.

Substantial gains in output in the earlier months this year have disappeared, yet sentiment in the markets now probably is stronger than at any time in the past several years.

With steelworks operations for June estimated, the average for six months is about 46 per cent, or 1 point below that last year. For every point the industry makes an average of 2,200 gross tons of ingots, so that the official figures when available this week will show a moderate loss.

The seasonal bottom in automobile assemblies is due late this month or early August, and beginning about the middle of August steel shipments will be resumed on a heavier basis. Chevrolet and Chrysler plan to be in production on new models by August 15. Assemblies last week totaled 89,000, down 1,500.

At the moment, construction work gives the most tangible promise of developing heavy tonnages. The industry had another fairly good week in structural shape awards, at 22,600 tons. Public works projects in the Middle West requiring 45,000 tons are scheduled for early closing. The Navy has issued specifications for 13 vessels to be built in private yards, taking 24,275 tons of steel, to be awarded in August.

Next week the first specifications are expected to be issued on 65,000 tons of steel for the 5,125 freight cars awarded by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. Canadian Pacific is inquiring for 1,200 freight cars, Canadian National 1,100. Wabash has purchased 5,000 tons of rails.

Premier Bonds Attract Funds

Investment Pressure Overcomes Advance Market Factors.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30,—Aided by a constant flow of investment funds into higher priced securities, the corporate bond market ignored all unfavorable influences last week and kept edging forward, with the single exception of railroad issues.

Filing of a petition in bankruptcy by the Chicago & Northwestern and talk of similar action by others had an unsettling effect on junior railroad bonds, which had run up briskly in recent weeks and were not in a strong technical position. Losses, however, were comparatively small.

The Associated Press average of 10 utility bonds attained new highs for the year on three occasions, and the average of 10 low-yield issues came within a fraction of duplicating the 1935 peak. The average of 20 rails got down nearly a full point at one time, but rallied sufficiently to cut the loss in half.

Indications that Congress would take up the Administration's new tax proposals at this session were believed in well-informed investment circles to have stimulated demand for so-called prime investment bonds, which have been neglected for many weeks because of the refunding vogue and high prices. The return on many of these loans is at record lows, and in some instances are close to the yields on longer term Government obligations.

Government bonds had an uneventful week, and price changes were small on balance.

Associated Gas Sales Again Make Record

New York, June 30.—Because of continued increase in industrial demand, the electric output of Associated Gas & Electric System for the week ended June 15, was again greater than ever previously reported for a comparable week in prior years.

Production amounted to 54,874,530 units, an increase of 5.4 per cent over the corresponding week last year. The production index of the Associated Gas & Electric System showed 102.88 per cent, compared with the index of the entire industry, which showed 102.4 per cent.

Consumption of Tin Ahead of Last Year

New York, June 30 (AP).—Consumption of tin in manufacture during the first four months of this year totaled 46,400 tons against 43,800 in the like period last year, the International Tin Research and Development Council reports.

Consumption in the United States in April was 4,983 tons against 4,049 in the same month last year. For the year ended April 30 domestic consumption was 49,220 tons against 58,352 in the preceding twelve months.

Business Prospects for Second Half Year Are Now Appraised Less Optimistically Owing to Price Declines, AAA Status, Durable Goods Lag.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, June 30.—Appraisals of business prospects for the second half year are becoming steadily less optimistic as its inception approaches. In fact, whereas a material improvement over the first six months of the year had been widely predicted in recent months, the question is now being asked whether a small recession may not actually develop.

A number of considerations help explain the prevailing tendency to appraise business prospects more conservatively. The injection of the tax reform issue into the current session of Congress, with consequent prolongation of legislative uncertainties through the summer season, is one factor. Already, purchasing agents say, the tax discussion has made several large buyers of materials and supplies less willing to place extensive forward commitments covering fall and winter requirements.

More significant is the gradual effect of the breakdown of the NRA codes in causing unsettlement in particular markets. Last week, the price of copper, held at 9 cents a pound for a month artificially despite the lifting of the code restrictions, was reduced by producers to 8 cents. Thus far, at least, large buyers continue to hold off their purchases, nevertheless. They wish to determine whether a further lowering of the price may not develop because weaker sellers must dispose of their output or stock on hand. Similarly, despite the continued high rate of consumption of gasoline, price cutting has broken out in particular areas, such as west New York State and some California cities. In fact, oil company executives wonder whether the price structure for petroleum and its products is as stable as appears on the surface. When the season of smaller consumption begins, the whole oil situation will take a turn for the worse unless the California situation, where restriction is not now applied by law, is corrected shortly, some observers predict.

Factors That Threaten Farm Purchasing Powers.

The drive against the continued collection of processing taxes by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is another possible cause of unsettlement. At this season of the year, of course, the legal fate of the processing taxes can not affect the size of the new crops coming to market. However, if the AAA should suffer a defeat in the courts similar to that of the NRA, and epecally if the defeat is such as to make doubtful the status of the agricultural adjustment program even with the addition of the pending AAA amendments, the psychological effect will probably be to cause material declines in many agricultural prices.

At the moment, the downward course of grain prices has been checked by extensive black rust damage, especially to the Northwest's spring wheat crop. This factor has again caused estimates of this year's wheat crop to be revised downward, and the sharp rally brought Minneapolis wheat back to a dollar a bushel at the end of last week. It is too early in the season to determine whether this damage will be lasting, however.

Retail sales, particularly of automobiles, have held up much better in agricultural areas than in industrial sections. In fact, the relative prosperity of the farmer has been the most important single pillar maintaining activity in consumers' goods industries in the past few months. Hence, if either a serious legal defeat of the AAA or large yields depress prices for agricultural products to an extent which will curtail prospective farm income materially, farmer buying will slump and business prospects for the next six months will become correspondingly worse.

The outbreak of protracted strikes would have a similar depressing effect upon retail trade and consequently general industrial activity.

Less Confidence of Durable Grades Upturn This Year.

The most commonly mentioned basis for expectations of a business upturn during the last half of 1935 has been the belief that the laggard durable goods industries would at last join the recovery procession.

The rising trend in residential construction has been the bright star in the durable goods firmament during the past few months. While the total of such building remains painfully small as compared with the pre-depression period, the percentage increase over the levels of 1932, 1933 and 1934 has been quite impressive. However, it has been evident that residential construction alone was not expanding fast enough to become a decisive general business influence during the last half of the current year. The Government public works program was expected to supplement it sufficiently, however, to place the durable goods industries on an active and profitable operating basis beginning with the early fall of this year.

Hopes of this kind, however, are now being revised downward. The upturn in residential building is slackening in several areas. More important, the modification of the Federal works relief program is designed to cut down materials expenditures to a minimum. While it is not yet clear how far the original grandiose public works plans will be abandoned, earlier estimates of what would be forthcoming in the way of Government orders for steel, lumber, cement, copper and other basic materials are being scaled sharply downward.

Prospects of more restrained business activity and lower prices do not augur well for corporate profits for the second half of the year. However, as long as the pressure of easy money continues highly effective and acceptable alternative commitments for investment funds remain very restricted, investment grade common stocks appear able to maintain themselves at the relatively high levels to which they have climbed in recent weeks.

100 Leading Stocks Advance 5.9% in Third Monthly Gain

New York, June 30.—The market appraisal of 100 representative common stocks advanced 5.9 per cent, or $789,023,000 in June, according to the monthly compilation of Frazier Jelke & Co. The total market value of the 100 stocks at the end of the month was $13,996,565,000 compared with $13,207,542,000 at the end of May and $12,843,332,000 at the end of April.

Twelve of the 13 sub-groups advanced in June, only the mines declining. The largest gain on a dollar basis was $151,770,000 in the motors. The miscellaneous industrials appreciated $129,793,000; the rails, $84,341,000, and the utilities, $82,828,000.

On a percentage basis the biggest advance in June was 10.4 per cent in the miscellaneous industrials. The motors advanced 9.6 per cent; the utilities, 9.1 per cent; the chemicals, 8.4 per cent; the building shares, 8.2 per cent; the retail issues, 8.1 per cent; the foods, 7.6 per cent; the steels, 7.2 per cent; the railroad equipments, 7.1 per cent; the electric manufacturing issues, 6.8 per cent; the rail, 6.4 per cent, and the oils five-tenths of 1 per cent. The mines declined 1.8 per cent.

The market value of the 100 issues is $504,446,000 higher than at the end of June, 1934, but $1,238,798,000 lower than on March 31, 1934.

Omens of Rise InAutumnSeen By Wall Street

Business and Finance Join in a Chorus of Optimism.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30.—Business and finance plunge into the usually quiet third quarter tomorrow with an extraordinary chorus of optimistic forecasts for autumn.

Rarely has there been such unanimity of opinion among Wall Street and Washington economists that the country is set for a substantial boost as soon as the vacation season draws to a close, and the seasonal stimulus make itself felt.

Wall Street, longing for an adjournment of Congress and an end of legislative worries, regards the Washington scene as more dark and forbidding since the President tossed his distribute-the-wealth tax proposals into the hopper, but the stock market has slipped back only a trifle.

Another source of some concern is the cloud of smoke still hovering over the NRA conflagration. The copper industry has finally given up trying to hold the code price of 9 cents a pound, and the red metal has dropped a full cent. The steel industry is confronted with a job price level when the automobile industry begins to lay in supplies to start work on fall models.

Nevertheless, the disappearance of the codes has caused but a fraction of the disturbance predicted in some quarters when the Supreme Court rendered its decision. Generally speaking, both merchants' and manufacturers' inventories are low. So it is hoped that the cloud of uncertainty over code removal will soon be dissipated.

Production in a number of lines has exceeded expectations in June. Some of the usual summer letdown is now expected. But such a slump as occurred last year, when business confidence was severely impaired by the unprecendented drought, is now regarded as highly improbable.

Postal Holders Announce Plan

Reorganization Is Asked or Absorption Into Wire Unit.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30.—Reorganization of the Postal Telegraph & Cable Corporation or its absorption, under Government edict, into a unified communications industry upon terms acceptable to security holders, will be demanded by a new bondholders protective committee headed by Cecil P. Stewart, it was disclosed today in a letter sent to holders.

In announcing its intention to intervene in proceedings initiated by the company in its application for reorganization under Federal bankruptcy laws, the committee stated that it represented "the rank and file" of security holders of the corporation and was not identified with any banking group or persons identified with the management of the interested companies.

In addition to Stewart, the committee includes Malcolm C. Rorty, president of the American Management Association, and formerly a vice president of the International Telephone & Telegraph, the parent organization, and George Akerley, a vice president of the International Telephone & Telegraph, the parent organization, and George Akerson, former secretary to Herbert Hoover.

North Western, St. Paul, Speed Revival Plans

Limit of 90 Days Set for Acceptance of C. & N. W. Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 30.—Plans for the speedy reorganization of two major carriers, the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Co. and the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, were being developed today.

The proposal for reorganization of the Milwaukee road was presented yesterday to Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, who approved a petition for adjustments under section 77 of the amended bankruptcy law. The Northwestern lines filed a petition for reorganization under the same section Friday before Federal Judge John P. Barnes.

Harry A. Scandrett, president of the Milwaukee road, said insurance companies and banks owning in excess of $100,000,000 of various issues of bonds had approved the plan. Copies of the petition and of bonds had approved the plan. Copies of the petition and of the proposed plan have been forwarded to the Interstate Commerce Commission, Scandrett said, and an early date asked for public hearings.

Indebtedness of the Milwaukee road as of June 30 was placed at $481,521,686.

Under the proposed plan the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will make additional loans to the railroad company up to $12,000,000, and will purchase equipment certificates for an additional $12,000,000 to provide for 80 per cent of the cost of new equipment.

Samuel H. Cady, vice president and general counsel of the Northwestern Lines, said the management will not wait more than 90 days for large institutional investors to accept its "comparatively mild" proposals for a plan of reorganizations.

Unless the investors accept the time, he said, a drastic plan calling for a sharp scaling down of debt will be offered.

Realty Bonds Up 20 Per Cent

200 Large Issues Score Substantial Advance in Half Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30.—An advance of 20.1 per cent in real estate bond prices for the first half of 1935 was shown today in a survey by Arnott, Baker & Co., Inc.

The calculation was based on dealer to dealer bids for 200 large issues secured by property principally in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo and Pittsburgh.

Present average market value per $1,000 bond considered in the survey is $353 compared with $294 at the close of 1934 and $187 on December 30, 1932.

Since the 200 issues have a par value of $512,295,597, the survey indicates an estimated total appreciation since 1932 of $83,000,000 and a gain of $29,500,000 since the first of the year.

Cities and the percentage gain in securities represented in the survey follows: Pittsburgh, 57.5; Buffalo, 28.5; miscellaneous, 24.7; New York, 19.3; Philadelphia, 12.1; Boston, 8.5.

Transit Revenues Register Increases

New York, June 30.—"Transit revenues for the week ended June 22, as reported by a representative group of companies, were somewhat higher than a year ago, as shown by the Transit Journal Indicator, which stands at 101.20, as compared with the corresponding week in 1934. For the week ending June 15, the Indicator stood at 100.21.

"The improvement which was evident in the previous week was continued. Gains were shown throughout the West, virtually all the reductions in revenue from last year being confined to the East. In no instance, however, were the changes from a year ago large in extent."

Large Fortunes Aid Business And Employment, Says Bank

To Whatever Extent the Principal Is Absorbed by the Treasury They Will Cease to Serve These Purposes, National City Declares.

New York, June 30.—Discussing the idea of an enforced leveling down of large fortunes by taxation, with restrictions upon future accumulations, the National City Bank of New York says in its July letter:

"The idea springs from an assumption that business is like a game of cards, in that whatever one person gains is at the expense of others, which is not true of legitimate business.

"Moreover, it over-emphasizes the feature of competition as against the feature of cooperation. As often set forth in these columns, and again in the last article of this number, the essential principle of the economic system is the exchange of services, which means that it is a system of cooperation in supplying common wants; competition is a subordinate feature, incidental to rivalry in cooperation. Competition arises inevitably from a comparison of goods or services and from freedom of individual initiative and choice. Competition exists not only between like commodities and services, but between different ones; not only between rival automobiles, but between an automobile and a trip to Europe.

"Business is not a struggle over existing wealth, but an organized system of cooperation in producing and exchanging desirable things. Labor and capital are both required in modern industry—the worker and the equipment with which he does his work—and the greater the facilities for production and exchange, the greater will be the volume of production, of the exchanges and of distribution to all groups and classes participating in the system. This is not the card-game set-up.

Basis of Proposed Policy.

"The proposed policy is based also upon an assumption that no one derives any benefit from wealth unless he owns it, which will not stand examination for a moment. It is like saying that no one has derived any benefit from the development of the steam engine unless he owned an engine, or from railroads unless he owned railroad stock or bonds, or from the development of electricity unless he owned public utility securities, or from any industrial development unless he had money invested in it.

"Contrary to this, it is well known that the changes in industry throughout the past have been steadily raising the living conditions of all the people, and that the humblest wage-earner in the land is benefited by every improvement in industry or trade that increases the purchasing power of his wage. The benefits of capital are diffused by use, and by the fact that it can not be used without the employment of labor.

"The fortunes under discussion are in the form of income-producing property as a rule, engaged in the production of goods and services for the market, other wealth being of insignificant proportion. A fortune may have been inherited, but aside from land, productive property rapidly loses its value by use and obsolescence, unless continually made over or replaced. It is not idle wealth, and the public pays nothing for its use unless it renders service. The public interest is not in the ownership, but in the services rendered.

Public Also Suffers Penalty.

"Everybody should pay taxes to meet the proper expenses of Government, but if wealth that is being used productively is drawn upon for that purpose the public suffers by the depletion even more than the owner, who actually withdraws from public use only what he consumes. If the proceeds of taxes are used unproductively, the public will lose, and tax yields will be lower in the future for all such depletion. The public no more than an individual, can eat its cake and still have it. Every waste is a social loss.

"If the method of proposed levies and their effects should be such as to disturb the businesses involved, the tax-income from such sources may be permanently reduced in the future, and their disturbance may affect other incomes and tax-results.

"A report of the new proposal states that whereas under the present system of estate taxes an administration is allowed eight and one-half years in which to pay estate taxes, with interest at 6 per cent, 25 years will be allowed for the payment of the inheritance taxes, with an interest rate below 6 per cent. These details indicate that the framers of the bill recognize the danger of disturbing reaction. They also indicate that as a source of revenue in the present emergency these taxes are not rated highly.

"In short, these fortunes now are a continuing source of revenue to the public treasury, also of employment and of support to other business; but to whatever extent the principal is absorbed by the Treasury they will cease to serve such purposes in the future. Like the spendthrift's inherited possessions, they will be gone."

New England Mills Hampered by Strikes

New York, June 30 (AP).—Strikes and walkouts in the manufacturing district between Providence and Woonsocket, R. I., tended to unsettle wool goods markets during the past week, says the New York Wool Top Exchange Service.

The market was also affected adversely by the decision of the Civilian Conservation Corps to postpone for a month or two heavy purchases of wool goods, pending new legislation regulating Federal contracts. The summary asserted that a number of mills have been depending on these orders to carry them over the slack period in late August and early September.

Money Experts Seek to Untie Currency Knot

Rivalries of Trade and Politics Complicate Problems.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30.—Unbalanced budgets, international trade rivalries, political jealousies, fears of war—these are a few major parts of the currency stabilization puzzle which monetary experts are trying to piece together.

Since May 14 when Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau issued what was regarded as an invitation to nations of the world to tackle the stabilization problem, efforts to fit together the pieces have been going on behind the scenes.

Morgenthau's stand was followed by United States assistance to France in warding off attacks on the franc.

On Friday Johannes Postmus, governor of the South African Reserve Bank, departed from London to the United States. Known as a stanch defender of the gold standard, he will seek detailed information here on motives in back of American stabilization ideas.

As the result of these steps, a number of leading economists and bankers feel that before the end of the year some concrete action may be taken which will start clearing the path for stabilization.

Presently, however, that path is so thorny as to make even the most intrepid statesmen and cabinets tread warily.

Fundamentally, world currency stabilization is felt to be a three-way party to which the invitees are Great Britain, the United States and France. Consequently, bankers say, until each of the three achieves somewhat more definite economic and political conditions, stabilization must remain a matter for hope rather than action.

Until action starts debate will run high. Many compare the problem to a cat chasing its tail. Some say: "There can be no stabilization until world recovery gets under way." As others see it: "There can be no recovery until currencies are stabilized." For a while yet none will care to bet on which should precede the other.

School Body Due to Name Head Today

Mrs. Henry G. Doyle Is Slated to Win Post Over H. I. Quinn.

Board of Education May Get Woman President for First Time.

Unless the unforeseen occurs, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle will be elected president of the Board of Education today when the board holds its annual oragnization meeting.

Her rival for the post is Henry I. Quinn. If elected, Mrs. Doyle will be the first woman president of the board.

The only other important item of business on the board's schedule is consideration of enlargement of the two committees recently named by the board to draw up standards for rating of teachers.

This may prove a controversial question as many believe the effort to increase the size of the committees is inspired by the desire of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, to limit the influence of Teachers Union members.

Rating Change Ordered.

The committees were constituted by the board, which ordered a change in rating procedure after Dr. Ballou had ignored complaints of the Teachers Union that the system in vogue was unfair.

Mrs. Doyle's election seemed certain Saturday when Henry Gilligan, board member, declared that he had decided to give her his vote. With her own vote and votes of Mrs. Mary A. McNeill and Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, this gives Mrs. Doyle a majority.

Two of the nine members of the board, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith and George M. Whitwell, probably will not be present at the meeting today. If they were present their support might go to Mrs. Doyle.

New Members Back Quinn.

Quinn, the only other likely candidate, is expected to get the support of the two new members of the board, Robert A. Maurer, of Georgetown University, and Benjamin L. Gaskins, colored attorney.

Mrs. Doyle now is vice president of the board. She began her service on the board in 1928 and now is serving her third three-year appointment.

Summer sessions for about 8,000 school children will begin today in the public schools. Courses will be available for those who failed in subjects during the winter sessions, while other students will be allowed to increase their knowledge of subjects in which they may consider themselves deficient.

All classes will start at 8:30 a. m. In the elementary schools, the classes will be dismissed at 12:30 p. m.; in the junior and senior high schools, dismissal will be at 1 p. m. In addition to the high schools, there will be 12 white and nine colored elementary schools at which classes will be conducted.

Four Held in Robbery Of Martinsburg Store

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 30.—William Mason, 24; Lawrence Rodgers, 18, and two children whose names were not revealed, were being held here today in connection with the robbery of a downtown jewelry store Thursday night. Several hundred dollars worth of stock was taken.

All but a small portion of the loot was recovered after the arrests, officers said. Some of it was found on Mason's property. Rodgers and his youthful companions also confessed, police said, to have ransacked a warehouse of the Peoples Drug Store Wednesday night. Police Capt. William Schill declared confessions had been obtained in the jewelry store robbery.

Liquor Dealer Penalized.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 30.—The Washington County board of license commissioners has served notice upon liquor and beer licensees that it will not countenance the sale of intoxicants after midnight Saturday, and suspended for one week the license of John Kyser, who was charged by Clarence Gaylor, investigator, with violating the closing law.

Marjorie Austin Wed to James Wood

Ceremony Performed at Church in Cambridge.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cambridge, Md., June 30.—Miss Marjorie Josephine Austin, daughter of Arthur Keene Austin, a former member of the Maryland House of Delegates, and Mrs. Austin, and James Henry Wood were married yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Church by the Rev. Andrew Tosick.

The bride was gowned in ivory satin, with a voluminous veil, draped from a coronet of lace and orange blossoms, and carried bride roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Frances Austin. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Robin Mace Kirwan and Miss Jeanne Winterbottom, Cambridge; Miss Claire Gerdes, Steelton, Pa.; Miss Anita Mace, Baltimore; Miss Rose Donati, Richmond, and Miss Betty Winterbottom, Cambridge. A reception was held at Mount Holly, the country home of the Austins.

The bride was graduated from St. Joseph's College, Emmitsburg, in 1934. Mr. Wood was educated at Candler College, Havana, and Cornell University. He is a son of Mrs. William Champlin, of this city, and the late Col. William T. Wood, of New York.

Communistic Gain Due, Says Thomas Mann

tinction of being persona non grata among the Hitlerites.

The little man, puffing at his cigarette, went on with gracious comments about his American friends. Unlike most traveling authors, he is not lecturing. Wherever he goes he seeks quiet, peace. For with him travels the manuscript of the third volume of his most recent work, still in the first of manuscript stages. He had been working at it—he writes in long hand with a fountain pen meticulously every day, setting down his slow words in a notebook—ever since he left his exile home in Switzerland.

And then the conversation turned from letters to politics, when the interviewer asked him what he thought of America's prolific and determined writers in the so-called "proletarian school."

"I am not a Communist, you know," Thomas Mann said slowly.

"But I must confess that communism is the only idea, the only thing which one can oppose to Fascism.

"In comparison, I prefer communism. But a Communist world would not be my world. I should not be happy * * *."

"He means, in communism there are ideas," said Mrs. Mann from across the room. "There is some future in it. So he means it is natural that authors, your authors, have this tendency."

"Ja! Communism is coming," Doktor Mann took up the thread. "It is coming through itself. The world is becoming Communist without quite being aware of it. Communism is in the air, whether we like it or not."

From communism he skipped to "Joseph," his latest novel, which, when finished, will be in three volumes. He hopes to complete the book this year, and then—his eyes light up as he says it—he will be a "free man." He wants to travel, to see all of the United States, to go to the Orient. "One cannot travel and work. To travel one must be free."

Proud of Success Here.

"I am very proud and very glad," he said in his precise English, marked with an accent that seemed a mixture of France and Germany—"yes, very proud that my great book in America has been a decided literary success. The press has been very good. It was, you know, something new for me. Previously I had made only bourgeois things—books that were individual. This has been the only time I have attempted anything mythical." (The Joseph triology has been described as a novel upon an ancient biblical theme that is forever modern.)

"When I have finished this," he went on, forgetting the heat, "I want to write a great essay on Nietsche."

There was nothing offensive in the way he said "great."

"It will be a pendant to my great essay on Wagner, which was not translated so well for you Americans."

Which is his own favorite book?

"I think I like 'Death in Venice' best," he said. It is the most closed."

"The most accomplished," said Frau Mann.

"The most all right," said its author.

"What he means is, O.K.," said Frau Mann.

Men, Women, Children in Four-Hour March.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 30.—Joseph Stalin reviewed more than 100,000 men, women and child athletes today in the annual physical culture parade through Red Square.

Hunters, archers, mountain climbers, girls in gym shirts and shorts, and nautical sportsmen carrying boats were among the paraders. Thousands of small children, in bright-colored sweaters, released a flock of carrier pigeons, which soard over Stalin's head as they passed the reviewing stand, on Lenin's tomb.

The parade lasted more than four hours and wound up with a balloon ascension from Red Square and a demonstration by 50 army planes, flying in the formation of the Soviet single star.

William C. Bullitt, American ambassador, was in the diplomatic stand, near Stalin's position, throughout the parade.

Head of Closed Bank in China Held by Court

Liquidator to Sue in U. S. Tribunal to Recover Alleged Big Bonus.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, June 30.—Frank J. Raven, head of the now defunct Raven Banking corporations, which closed May 24, was placed under the custody of the United States court in China today.

Judge Milton J. Helmick, who issued a writ restraining Raven from leaving the court's jurisdiction, acted upon a complaint by Frank Hough, liquidator, that Raven was planning to proceed to the United States. This Raven denied.

Judge Helmick specified that Raven post a bond of $20,000 by 7 p. m. tomorrow or go to jail. Court officials said Raven's associates sought a reduction of the bond, but the court refused.

Raven was controlling stockholder of the American Oriental Banking corporation and three allied companies. He said they represented assets of approximately $24,000,000. Raven, a former resident of San Jose, Calif., and Honolulu, blamed the American silver purchasing program for his plight.

Hough today charged the Raven corporations "in reality have been insolvent since 1932, despite which the directors in January, 1932, voted Raven a bonus of more than half a million silver dollars, which they have been paying off since."

The liquidator said he would file suit in United States court seeking return of the bonus. Raven, at his country home, declined to discuss Hough's charges other than to maintain he had not intended to leave Shanghai.

Keys RideOut Rain On 26th Day in Air

Brothers Far Beyond Mark Set 5 Years Ago.

By the United Press.

Meridian, Miss., June 30.—The flying Keys, Al and Fred, late today rode out a heavy rain that had threatened their endurance flight in its twenty-sixth day.

They left the municipal airport, renamed Key Field in their honor, and for some two hours flew over an area 10 miles north of Meridian where the weather was more favorable.

The rain had ceased late in the day, the sun was breaking through the lingering clouds and the forecast was for fair weather.

The youthful Mississippians had been aloft 627 hours at 3:32 p. m. This was far beyond the official endurance flight record set five years ago by the Hunter brothers in Chicago.

It was within striking distance, too, of the unofficial record of Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brein. The Keys will equal this mark at 12:02 p. m. tomorrow unless they are forced down before that time.

Japan, Soviet Crisis Follows Border Dispute

Russia Claims 3 Invasions of Siberian Territory Near Manchukuo.

By the United Press.

Moscow, June 30.—Diplomatic tension between Japan and Soviet Russia tonight was increasing because of a series of incidents along the border between Siberia and the Japan-sponsored Empire of Manchukuo.

Three times within the last fortnight, according to an official Soviet statement, Japanese and Manchu soldiers have crossed the Amur River and "invaded" Soviet territory.

A formal diplomatic protest has been made to the foreign office in Tokyo by the Soviet Ambassador there with regard to the first invasion and separate protests probably will be made covering the second two, the statement said.

The new crisis follows a period of apparent improvement in Soviet-Japanese relations due to settlement of the Chinese Eastern Railway controversy, in which Russia agreed to sale of the strategic line to Manchukuo, at the insistence of Japan. The railway lies wholly in Manchukuo, but was owned by Russia.

Troops Hold Fire.

The border patrols of the United Soviet Socialist Republics withheld their fire in all three cases when Japanese and Manchu detachments were found in Soviet territory, it was said, because of Russia's strong desire for peace. Moscow will attempt to settle all the incidents peacefully. The Russian Embassy in Tokyo will try to find out, however, whether the Japanese-Manchu patrols acted on their own initiative or in accordance with orders from the high command of the Japanese Kwantung army—Japanese army in Manchukuo and North China.

Unofficial sources said if it was discovered the "invasions" were in accord with official Japanese instructions Moscow would have to consider them an attempt to precipitate war.

No New Portests.

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Monday), July 1.—No new protests have as yet been received from the Soviet Embassy regarding alleged invasions of Siberia by Japanese troops, it was said at the foreign office today.

In the case of the first protest, it was recalled, Japan replied that investigation revealed that Japanese forces did not cross the Amur, but that a Russian patrol did enter Manchukuo.

Japanese officials did not consider Russo-Japanese relations as "strained" and intimated the new Russian protests were part of Soviet propaganda designed to center world opinion on Japan's activities in north China. It was pointed out that Japan would like to break Soviet control of outer Mongolia so that Japanese traders could regain their commerce in that country. Moscow, fighting this Japanese move, might be expected to continue "a general anti-Japanese propaganda campaign in the hope her dominant position in Mongolia could be maintained."

Brode stayed with Tony Pastor until the showman died. He was accompanist for Anna Held, Lillian Russell, George M. Cohan, Pat Rooney, the first, and other stars.

ATHLETES SAY:
"THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND!"

CARL HUBBELL, star pitcher of the New York Giants: "Camels are so mild," he says, "they never get my wind or ruffle my nerves."

CARL HUBBELL, a Camel smoker for many years, caught in action on the diamond! He says: "Camels have flavor, plus mildness—a rare combination. I'd walk a mile for a Camel!"
GEORGE M. LOTT, JR., tennis star, says: "Camels never take the edge off my condition or get my wind, because they are mild. I understand more expensive tobaccos are used in Camels. That accounts for their mildness!"
GEORGE BARKER, the former intercollegiate track star: "A cross-country runner has to keep in shape. I've learned one thing about cigarettes—Camels are mild. They don't get my wind, and they never bother my nerves."
SAM HOWARD, the high-diving champion, says: "I can smoke Camels all I want to and keep in perfect 'condition.' Camels are so mild. They never get my wind. And when tired a Camel gives me new energy."

YOU'LL LIKE THEIR MILDNESS TOO!
Because Camels are so mild... made from more costly tobaccos than any other popular brand ...you can smoke all you please. Athletes are agreed that Camels do not jangle the nerves or get the wind. And you'll find that your taste never tires of their appealing flavor.
SUSAN VILAS, the free-style swimming champion: "I've discovered that Camels are mild. They don't cut down my wind. Camels are so full of rich, smooth taste, they must be made from more expensive tobaccos."
BILL MEHLHORN, the star golfer, adds this timely word: "I've got to keep fit to compete in tournament golf. I can smoke Camels steadily. From years of experience I know they won't get my wind or jangle my nerves."
SO MILD YOU CAN SMOKE ALL YOU WANT

COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

The Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, Va., will meet at 10 a. m. Wednesday in the board rooms of the county courthouse.

In addition to regular business the board will pass on claims of persons who have suffered loss of livestock or poultry by attack by dogs.

It is expected the board will discuss projects proposed by a number of citizens for enlargement of several county schools with funds to be obtained by loans and grants from the Federal Government.

"Virginia Farm Houses and What They Need;" "Is It Worth While to Put Work and Money Into Making the Farm House Attractive and Comfortable?" "Why Our Farm Needs a Modern Water System;" "What Our House Needs to Bring It Up to Date;" "Kitchen Equipment That I Would Like to Have," and "Recent Improvements to Our House and What They Mean to Us."

Seventeen women are now being employed on a sewing project sponsored by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration at Fairfax. Clothing for women and children and bed quilts are being made. The New National Theater.

It is a hopeful indication that not all perspective has been lost when a beleaguered Congress can find time and heart to set up a national theater. The Wagner-McLaughlin bill has now passed both chambers and only the President's signature is needed to place the United States on a par with the rest of the world in recognizing officially the benefits and values inherent for its people in such a development.

The bill, which incorporated the American National Theater and Academy, comes in response to the suggestions of many citizens who have offered support provided the theater could be conducted under a Federal charter. Requiring, then, no Federal subsidy, the theater announces as its purposes the presentation of productions "of the highest type;" the stimulation of public interest in the drama; the development of study of the drama in schools and universities, and encouragement to perfect the art and technique of the theater.

An imposing array of patrons is named to supervise and sponsor the undertaking. It is interesting to remark the range of their interests: the list includes a philharmonic director, an architect, a sociology expert, as well as bankers, industrialists and social leaders. Catholic and cultured as their tastes must be, nonetheless the patrons have no easy assignment. Accepted classics will doubtless fare well at their hands. But there is danger that the official aegis will involve a timid and stultifying attitude toward contemporary art.

Would, for instance, "Waiting for Lefty" be included in the programs? And, further, will the theater be bound by its patrons (who are almost necessarily of a brahmanic point of view) to confine itself to the amenities of musty theatrical tradition or will it be permitted to remember the barnyard and the lunchwagon and thus to pulsate with real life, thereby justifying its name—the American National Theater?

Resolutions of Self-Interest.

Many international conferences have been held since the war and many admirable resolutions have been passed by those conferences without perceptible effect upon the course of world economic and political developments. As a result, there is widespread skepticism as to the value, if not the sincerity, of formal declarations of this sort. The International Chamber of Commerce, however, is composed of representatives of business and financial interests whose opinions carry the more weight because unmistakable self-interest rather than pure idealism go to their formation.

For that reason alone, the discussions and the conclusions reached at the convention of the I. C. of C. held last week in Paris are worthy of close attention. It is significant, for instance, that the British delegation should be willing to indorse in substance a resolution sponsored by the Americans declaring that stabilization is essential to world recovery. While that does not necessarily hasten the day when stabilization negotiations will begin, it indicates that illusions regarding the beneficial effects of currency management as a substitute for an international gold standard are fast vanishing. That means that national self-interest—one of the most powerful reform agencies in the world—is on the side of advocates of stabilization.

Similarly, the position taken by the American delegation on the war debts augurs well for a reasonable adjustment of this troublesome question. A spokesman for the American group expressed the hope that the debt issue would be settled "on a basis that would be fair and considerate of the best interests of debtor and creditor nations alike." A strong declaration, opposing continued efforts to collect from our foreign debtors, was on reflection discarded in favor of a milder statement not so likely to arouse political resentment at home.

The convention also called for a lowering of tariff barriers and recorded its disapproval of bilateral trade agreements unless accompanied by most-favored-nation clauses. This is an indorsement in principle of the policies followed by the State Department in conducting reciprocal tariff negotiations.

The endeavor to aim at objectives that are attainable instead of overshooting the mark by demanding too much is highly commendable because it shows that the delegates are not going on record for "show" purposes. They want action. They need action, and they hope to secure action by influencing instead of antagonizing the men who control the political destinies of the countries represented at the Paris gathering.

The Soft Coal Problem.

The strategy by which organized labor in the bituminous coal industry hopes to force action on the Guffey coal stabilization bill is quite obvious. Indeed, President Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, makes no secret of his intention to employ strikes or threats of strikes to push the passage of this measure. While such tactics are open to serious criticism, the fact that the union leaders have twice within two weeks agreed to a postponement of the strike shows that they are anxious to avoid a conflict. These recurrent crises at least have the merit of focussing public attention upon the problem presented by a demoralized natural-resource industry which can not prosper under conditions of free competition.

Many coal operators, especially those having healthy labor relations, believe that the only salvation for the industry lies in governmental intervention to restrict output and regulate prices, even though that means elimination of submarginal mines. Labor leaders, too, fully realize that a disorganized industry can not permanently sustain a decent scale of wages or insure regularity of employment to mine workers. Consequently, while strikes for higher wages and lower hours are threatened, such demands are coupled with pressure to secure legislative aid in reorganizing the industry.

The overdeveloped state of the coal industry, the wide range of production costs, and the wage variations between unionized and nonunionized territory alike emphasize the need for Federal intervention. Certainly the public has suffered sufficiently from the effects of recurrent labor conflicts in the coal fields to understand that unregulated competition there is not working out well for anybody. Nevertheless, regulation would be a national misfortune if it were to take the form of an alliance between mine operators and organized mine labor, with the former intent upon reducing output and raising prices, and the latter insisting upon high wages and shorter hours, regardless of the financial capacity of the industry. Regulation should be accompanied by provisions for a reorganization of the industry to eliminate high-cost mines, to bring about economies in operations, and to provide ample safeguards against exploitation of consumers.

There is some danger that labor leaders intent upon increasing jobs will insist upon spreading work and maintaining wages, resisting efforts to eliminate unfit producers from the field. President Lewis says, for instance, that the price provisions of the proposed coal stabilization bill would permit operators to meet union demands. Doubtless they would in some cases, but it is open to ask whether consumers will agree to hold the bag. Certainly, if the coal industry is sufficiently "affected with a public interest" to be subject to Federal regulation, it must be prepared to limit its charges to reasonable figures. Regulation would not be justified if it enabled operators and organized labor to combine to mulct the public. Moreover, excessively high prices for coal would only create new difficulties for the industry by encouraging resort to substitute fuels and power sources.

The question of the constitutionality of a Federal regulatory law has also to be most carefully considered. The Guffey bill has been sharply criticized on that score and it must be very closely scrutinized before enactment to avert the danger of later return to conditions of unregulated competition. Congress would be doing less than its duty if it permitted its judgment on these questionable matters to be swayed by strike threats. The unions are justified in asking for action. They are not justified in attempting to coerce the hasty passage of any particular measure that meets with their approval.

The Small Loans Bill.

The small loans bill reported favorably to the House by its District Committee is by no means the least important of the local measures now before Congress. Under present conditions Washington companies lending small sums to District residents entirely escape regulation. Too frequently families in need of funds to carry them through an emergency find themselves at the mercy of loan sharks. Even an act which must be considered experimental seems preferable to this complete lack of regulation.

Apparently the chief reason for delaying enactment of the bill prepared by Corporation Counsel Prettyman is a controversy with the Russell Sage Foundation. This agency is sponsoring the so-called uniform law, permitting interest charges of 3½ per cent per month or 42 per cent per year. It is contended that since these interest rates are legalized in Maryland and Virginia, the District should not adopt a more stringent law. To this Mr. Prettyman rightly replies that the local measure should be drafted to meet conditions here and not for the convenience of neighboring States.

The bill now before Congress would permit interest charges up to 2 per cent a month on unsecured loans, with a small additional service charge. Except for very small loans, which the bill seeks to discourage, these charges would be substantially lower than those permitted in the so-called uniform law. After months of investigation Mr. Prettyman came to the conclusion that any rate lower than 2 per cent would drive legitimate companies out of business. While this rate appears exorbitant by comparison with commercial interest, the committee has accepted it as the lowest figure under which a business involving so many risks can be conducted.

Opposition has also come from Congressmen who believe that no such high rates should be sanctioned by law. Their position is somewhat undermined, however, by the seemingly inescapable demand for small unsecured loans and by the fact that prohibition of this business in Washington would drive residents of the Capital to suburban towns where they would have to pay even higher interest.

No advance assurance can be given that the Prettyman plan would operate successfully. But if expectations are fulfilled it would be a distinct improvement over present conditions. And there is a strong probability that the plan would mean substantial savings for those unfortunates who are forced by emergencies to borrow money without security.

Revenue Needed.

The fiscal year ended yesterday with a deficit of about $3,500,000,000, and the public debt at a record high level of nearly $29,000,000,000. In spite of increased revenues, expenditures amounted to almost twice total governmental receipts during the year just closed, and the coming fiscal year will probably end with as great a gap between income and outgo. The state of the public Treasury shows quite plainly that additions to tax revenues are imperatively needed, and holding Congress in session to construct a new tax program will be amply justified if ways and means can be found for reducing current and prospective deficits.

In his tax message asking for action the President not only made a plea for new impositions to forward a more equitable distribution of wealth, but also stressed the importance of increased revenues. On the basis of various official studies, he said that he was making "a number of suggestions of important changes in our policy of taxation, based on the broad principle that if a government is to be prudent its taxes must produce ample revenues without discouraging enterprise; and if it is to be just, it must distribute the burden of taxes equitably."

This is admirable doctrine but apparently the President has forgotten one of his two stated objectives, since he is now urging Congress to finish its work speedily by confining itself to the recommendations contained in the tax message. Those called merely for tax increases on a few score incomes in the highest brackets, additions to inheritance taxes, and graduated taxes on corporate incomes. It has been pointed out that the returns from such levies would be negligible, and Senator Harrison, who has acted a go-between for the President, does not deny the fact.

Thus the President's tax program resolves itself into a feeble effort to extract a few extra millions from the very rich and from some of the less well-to-do who are stockholders in big corporations. He is definitely opposed to any general tax revision at the present time, although Congress is waiting, additional revenues are imperative and it is evident that only comprehensive changes in the tax laws will yield substantial returns.

It would be sheer waste of time for Congress to linger simply for the purpose of placing a perfunctory stamp of approval upon the fragmentary tax program vaguely outlined in the President's surprise message. These fumbling and inadequate efforts to bring about a more equitable distribution of the tax burden will neither silence share-the-wealth advocates nor accomplish anything appreciable toward solving the problems created by deficits exceeding $3,000,000,000 yearly.

Commerce And State Know.

James A. Moffett, Federal Housing Administrator, is said to be making an informal inquiry into the effect of our silver-buying policy upon China. Since Mr. Moffett's trip to the Far East is primarily a vacation, it may be surmised that he expects to enjoy himself in acquiring information on this much-investigated subject. Otherwise, his study is entirely unnecessary, for abundant evidence is already at hand to show the disastrous results of soaring silver prices upon the economy of China.

Even if no precise data were available, any person with a fair knowledge of monetary history and theory could explain from his own doorstep the effect upon China of a sudden speculative rise in the purchasing power of its chief monetary medium. The inevitable outcome is drastic deflation of the prices of certain commodities and hoarding of coins whose bullion value is greater than their nominal value.

Furthermore, the President can, if he wishes, get all the information needed in this line by sending a messenger a very short distance from the White House. The Department of Commerce has available a large amount of information concerning the effect of silver buying upon China. So has the Department of State. If this material were not so subject to official censorship, as contrary in its findings to Administration policy, there would be no need to burden Mr. Moffett's well-earned vacation with a totally superfluous inquiry.

In Maine the market price of a barrel of potatoes dropped to 10 cents. This condition makes it possible for a potato farmer to subsist for practically nothing by the simple expedient of eating his own potatoes.

It is to be doubted if permanent peace would be a consummation devoutly to be wished, for indications are that it will come only when there's nothing left worth fighting for.

Then, too, that belt of trees would provide the Middle Westerners something to climb to keep from drowning.

For Street Car Uniformity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I broadcast a plea for more uniform rules regarding entering and leaving street cars, and paying fares?

For years we were instructed to enter through the rear door, pay when entering, and leave through the front door. Then came the one-man cars, and we were obliged to always enter the front door and leave through the rear door; this I never did, because I feared the door would be closed upon me, or the car would start before I was off. Then came the passes, and more confusion at the front door of all cars.

Now we have the beautiful, comfortable new cars, but even greater confusion. The first trip I made, I was told to enter the front door, the motorman said: "Pass on down, leave by the center door, and pay as you leave." The second trip I entered the front door, stood for some time, then seeing a vacant seat in the rear, I moved quickly to get it, and succeeded. When ready to leave the car I went to the center door, token in hand, and the conductor said very courteously and pleasantly, "you should have paid when you passed the box, on your way to the rear seat."

Personally I prefer to pay upon leaving the car. But may we at least have uniformity and no more "one-man" cars! Someone is always running madly up and down the loading platform, not knowing which door to use. G. M. U.

Note To Mr. L.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to call J. S. Lorenz's attention to the fact that "none" (meaning not one or not any) may take either a singular or a plural verb, depending on the meaning. Don't mention it, Mr. L.

And that reminds me: In this morning's Post was a paragraph about how a motion picture director in Hollywood contended that "Between you and me" was wrong; that it should be "Between you and I!" Dear, dear, we can expect most anything from Hollywood.

Plight Of W. B. & A. Investors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing of one of the evils which have developed through the grasping holding companies which are strangling our country. All hail to President Roosevelt if he can curtail them.

We hear much of an alleged attack on the investments of thousands of American citizens, investments which it is claimed will be lost if the holding companies are divided again into their constituent parts. I well remember when the monopoly of the former Standard Oil Co. was liquidated. It was said that the unscrambling would bring ruin and distress to thousands; but behold, after the owners of the holding Standard Oil Co. had received the division of the shares to which they were entitled in the constituent companies, the property so received was shortly worth considerably more than it had been when represented by the holding Standard Oil Co. shares.

Should there be other unscramblings now, and the owners of holding company shares should receive, in just division, the shares in the constituent companies to which they might be entitled, it could hardly be an injury, because they would have in another form exactly what they had before. It is to be expected that, as our President has said, the local companies can manage better for themselves, and, in that case, all the properties would become more valuable.

In holding companies there is generally an injustice to the owners of the constituent companies, because generally there is a greater issue of holding company shares, and other securities, than there were in the company acquired. This, of course, was to provide a profit, rake-off, for the promoters. It has happened that a constituent company is sacrificed for the benefit of the holding company, after control of the smaller company has been secured. The holding company may want a portion of the newly acquired company, generally the most valuable, and by divers manipulations these are separated from the newly acquired interest, become the property of the holding company, and the balance of the property is then allowed to default and be wiped out in a receivership.

We have an example in Maryland, where the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Lines have been sold under foreclosure for junk, or to junk dealers, which is generally considered the same thing. In former years this line operated successfully in close association with the local electric light plant. This electric light company supplied current for a large district where the demand was ever-increasing. The surplus current was absorbed by the railway, and thus these two local enterprises, conducted together, were able to operate successfully.

A holding company, the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co., of Baltimore, with the instincts of an octopus, coveted the electric light and power business, and then it was a shock to a grasping instinct that current should come into Baltimore over the wires of the W., B. & A.

Of course, we do not know all the details, but in the shuffle the local electric light company became the property of the Consolidated Gas & Electric Co., of Baltimore, and after that the W., B. & A. had to buy its current from the holding company, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore. Then, after a matter of two or three years the W., B. & A. was allowed to go into the hands of a receiver, and this month it was sold for junk, or largely to junk dealers. The octopus holding company has forged one more link of the fetters which are to chain to it the electric light and the electric power service of Maryland, but a formerly prosperous region, a whole countryside, where there are homes, farms and growing villages, is to be blighted, all for the benefit of a holding company. And the stockholders and the bondholders of the W., B. & A., they are nothing but another group of small investors losing practically all. LOBODENT.

More On Old Churches.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In connection with several recent letters in this section on the subject of the oldest Protestant Church buildings in America, Holy Trinity (Old Swedes) of Wilmington, Del., was mentioned as one of two Protestant Episcopal churches which are the oldest in which regular services are still conducted. Also the Gloria Dei Church of Philadelphia, erected in 1699.

As a matter of historical fact, it should be noted that both the above churches were erected by Lutheran congregations. The change from Lutheran to Episcopal ownership is the old story of the camel's nose. While this story is a perfectly honorable one, historical credit should be given to the Lutheran Church and to those early Lutheran Swedish pioneers who colonized in 1637 on the Delaware River, where Wilmington and Philadelphia now stand, for more than a generation before William Penn arrived.

HENRY MANKEN, JR.,

Washington, June 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While your readers are presenting claims on behalf of the oldest churches, I should like to put in a plea for the church ministered to by Roger Williams three full centuries ago. The outer boards have been renewed, but I was assured 40 years ago that the timbers are original. It is a very small church and at the time of my visit was in custody of the Essex Institute at Salem, Mass. I presume it is still there. The date of building was previous to 1635, when Williams was exiled from the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

Explanation Wanted.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Does the District of Columbia now possess a dictator in the person of Mr. Blanton, of Texas? I have observed that the bitter and unvarying hostility of Mr. Blanton in the House Committee on the District is sufficient to defeat any and every measure that comes before that committee for the material benefit of the District. And now it appears that Mr. Blanton can dictate and control District police promotions. One can not but wonder how Mr. Blanton has achieved so much power.

Incidentally, the successful consummation of Mr. Blanton's infamous "gentlemen's agreement" with certain District police officers requires some explanation by the Commissioners, who evidently are now taking orders from Mr. Blanton. EDWARD C. POTTER.

Winds Of Adversity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Administration is being subjected to more than the usual amount of criticism, at least the editorial scales, as between favorable and adverse comment, have taken a dip in the latter direction. Since the NRA balloon was pricked there has been a greater tendency to find fault with both the good and the bad. However that may be, none can but praise the President's plans to salvage the youth of our country, and the benefits to be derived from such a measure are not to be lightly gainsaid.

Once more, let us salute Franklin D. Roosevelt for another effort in using the winds of adversity to fill the sails of opportunity.

From Syrups To Mayonnaise

Post Office, Monday.

CONTROVERSIES—we find to our sorrow—are like rivers in the flatlands: they broaden as they go. They broaden out of all recognition. This Column's once innocent discussion of U. S. coffee-customs provides a terrible example and a worried warning.

Somebody wrote us for advice as to how to inveigle the average American waiter into filling an order for cafe-au-lait—even when correctly translated "coffee with hot milk." On the same fatal day, somebody else asked us how he could bribe the average American waiter to serve after-dinner coffee after luncheon—instead of with the meal.

Did these letters constitute a conspiracy?

They were written by residents of distantly separated sections of Washington, having no business relations with each other—or having no business to have business relations with each other, anyhow. Although we published the communications over pseudonyms, at the request of the writers, their real names were appended for our reassurance, and we may say that they are names not unknown to us—perhaps even not unknown to fame.

There was every reason to believe that these men were gentlemen simple and sincere. On several occasions, they had, without collusion, shown us certain marks of consideration. Besides, in what appeared to be genuine trouble, they appealed to us for mere morsels of our justly valued help.

We couldn't refuse it.

With our usual preference for discretion over valor, we intimated to these petitioners that the way to get cafe-au-lait any time—the way to get after-lunch coffee after a lunch—was the same way as the one whereby anybody got a ham sandwich without lettuce. And that way, we concluded, we simply could not discover.

Well, this ingenous answer started a laudable institution: the SRA, or Sandwich Restoration Administration.

But now we are mourning among mountains of letters which discuss every sort of food from Turkish helva to South Carolinian rattlesnakes.

Here, for instance, is our Alexandrine friend, Mr. Clerk, with a defense of the Mayonnaise Menace, on the ground that mayonnaise is good for the young:

"To this writer, ham is something faintly unfortunate that happened to a pig who could better have been roasted fresh. However, although the introduction of lettuce into the ham sandwich is probably a corollary of the curious notion that red and green is a combination of colors particularly pleasing to the discriminative eye, the mayonnaise custom has its uses.

"In the heyday of 'soda,' simple milkshake and cherry-phosphate sufficed: 'Fountains' were given in charge of irresponsible adolescents. Their clientele was, as now, largely drawn from their contemporaries—and then rivalry arose. The apparently indestructible digestive systems of the very young, plus their insatiable enthusiasm for sucrose, made such a fertile field for gastronomic experiment that each white-cap tried to outdo his neighbor. A Pelion of marshmallow cream was piled on an Olympus of ice cream, and an Ossa of chocolate was added thereto. The maraschino cherry arose in its might.

"So attractive did these palaces of light and sugar become, so reluctant were the young to leave the wit and beauty to be found there, that the race itself was periled. Certain vital food-elements were undeniably lacking. Frightened parents interferred.

"Well, an inspired, though unsung, master of the syrup-pipes suggested the addition of sandwiches.

"At first, he was laughed at. How could palates accustomed to 'Love's Young Dream Special' find attraction in two slices of what was currently accepted as bread, embracing, be it never so boyishly thin, a slab of ham?

"'But wait a minute,' urged the genius. 'I mean to add mayonnaise.'

"He added mayonnaise—

"And he triumphed!

"In the fountain ham-handwich," concludes Mr. Clerk, "the lettuce-leaf performs merely the decorative function that was widely performed by the once almost omnipresent sprig of parsley."

And then he postscripts: "Of course many restaurants have followed frantically those fountains' suit. The patronage of the young is worth having. They not only eat more; they eat oftener; much more at a time and much more often than do we, whom approaching age and its attendant sodamint have taught a melancholy moderation."

* * *

We are not amused. Is his "we" an editorial "we?" I "We," indeed! "Speak for yourself, John."

Monthly Interventions.

POSSIBILTY of a demand for a law requiring the Administration to intervene in the bituminous coal situation at least once a month is seen as an outgrowth of the predicament in which the coal operators and the mine union leaders found themselves as late as Saturday night. Somewhere there was a slip-up or oversight and until within a few hours of the scheduled strike no one in the Government had gone through the customary motion of asking both sides to postpone their strike for 30 days or so. As a result, both the mine union leaders and the operators were in a highly nervous state. It looked as though they were really going to have to carry out the strike to save their faces.

Finally, after the fashion of a judge giving a last-minute reprieve, Miss Perkins came to the rescue and told the operators and leaders that the President wished them to postpone their strike for 30 days and asked them if they would do it. The newspaper stories of the incident do not adequately reflect the enthusiasm with which they agreed. They said, in effect, "Indeed, they would."

• • • •

What is causing great concern among the operators and union leaders now, however—in fact, it is a matter equal almost in importance to the Guffey bill—is that they not get caught like this again. For several weeks the miners and the operators, or a large number of the operators, have been conducting a sham battle with a view to forcing the passage of the Guffey bill which, to put it very affectionately, would set up a little NRA for the coal industry. The union leaders and the operators say passage of this bill is essential to stabilization of the coal industry. As sort of a side-line, the union leaders are demanding a shortened working week and an increase in wages. They will be content with a continuation of existing schedules, it is generally assumed, which the operators, when the sparring is over, are willing to adhere to. No one acquainted with the situation believes John L. Lewis, the miners' leader, would really take his uninformed charges out on strike to enforce higher wages and shorter hours in view of the gains made in the last two years. He has done some very temperamental things in his career, but it is not believed he would do this. He has joined those of the operators wanting the Guffey bill, however, and keeps threatening a strike. When it comes to stabilization of the industry, some students cannot understand why general agreement on wages and employment conditions does not effect a great degree of stability inasmuch as wages are the greatest costs of the industry.

• • • •

Be that as it may, the Administration has been "intervening" every time the date set for the big strike approached. Mr. Roosevelt would ask both sides to postpone their action for a while and they would agree with the appearance of reluctance and saying at the time they wished passage of the Guffey bill would be hurried up because maybe they couldn't postpone the strike again.

The most recent strike was set for last night. About Friday night it occurred to some of the operators or union leaders to ask "Oh, by the way, has anyone in the Administration intervened yet?" A check-up disclosed that no one had. Then did the boys get busy, so to speak. They ran around asking one another, "Say, isn't someone going to intervene?" And the more they ran around the more excited they got. It was something the Administration was supposed to do. It was purely a routine affair, but here with the time for the strike almost on them, not a word had come from the Administration.

It is not known what the trouble was. Presumably the Administration was so busy it just overlooked this little matter. Miss Perkins probably had all of the things she was supposed to do on Friday and Saturday written in her engagement book, but apparently there was no reminder that she was to intervene in the coal strike. Maybe her secretary was negligent.

The suggestion now is that a matter of this importance should not be left to her discretion or to her memory. Ours should be a government by law and not by the whims of a bureaucrat, it is pointed out. If there were a law requiring that on certain days Miss Perkins had to intervene in the bituminous coal situation, it is contended, her legal department would watch out for it. Or maybe a lot of interventions could be gotten up in advance.

"How the heck do you expect us to sleep with that prodigy reading half the night?"

Britain Has Doubts

Initial Enthusiasm For German Naval Agreement Gives Way To Suspicion That England Has Come Out On Short End And That Continent Has Been Undiplomatically Flouted.

By Edward Acheson,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London (By Mail).

THE nearly unanimous and highly enthusiastic approval with which the Anglo-German Naval Limitations Agreement was originally greeted in London, has now given way in a number of quarters to a not inconsiderable doubt. Immediately upon its announcement, the prevailing emotion in the country was markedly one of relief. Here, at last, last, a great unknown factor in the European situation had been brought out into the open, and given a quantitative reality. Germany had voluntarily limited her potential sea power, a consummation which England no matter how devoutly she might have wished it, could not have brought about, either by bargaining, since nothing could be given in return, nor by coercion, since none was possible.

The ratio, almost 1 to 3, seemed to give England her traditional control of the sea, and if the less rigid, expanding, ratio in the submarine category caused any misapprehension, the expression of it was muted in the peans of national acclaim.

No achievement of the present government, except possibly its initial electoral victory, was accorded such a splendid "press," but any gesture in the direction of peace, anything that could be interpreted as an entering wedge into the deadlock of the last 18 months, was predestined to receive a wholehearted welcome. For the opposition had made an issue of "peace;" it had drummed away at "peace" in the House of Commons, in its newspapers, and in bye-elections; it had set a premium on any sort of international understanding.

Now the government had, apparently, scored a signal victory in the very field against which criticism had leveled its heaviest guns.

BUT second thoughts have mitigated the general enthusiasm to some degree, Although the so-called popular press still stands four-square behind the government, there are rumblings of dissension in other camps.

The first indication of a shifting public opinion could have been gathered from the rather sheepish attitude which most papers were forced to take toward France. An initial attempt was made to dismiss the French attacks on the agreement as "purely legal," and to characterize the British attitude as "realistic." However, the somewhat tactless joy of the Germans over their new "alliance" did not aid and abet those British ministers whose job it was to oint out the peace angle in their latest achievement.

Almost immediately it was recognized that the approach, at least, had been "realistic," and to a degree it had raised very real issues. Italy, France, Russia de-Poland demanded their bearings in this suddenly created situation, and England was was forced to ask herself whether she was sure of her own.

In this process of soul-searching, criticism of the agreement has sprung from two sources, the opposition Liberals and, oddly enough, the adherents of the theory of security through arms.

• • • •

THE objections of the latter are more easily grasped, and rest not only on the terms of the agreement, but also on its changes of enforcement. In the first place, the question raised whether a 35 per cent ratio does give England adequate security on the sea. Such a ration means a virtual parity in all classes of ships in home waters. In the submarine category, the fact that Germany will be permitted ten more U-boats than she boasted in 1914 is hardly a matter of self-congratulation in London. Against this, all naval strategists know that the menace they once did. ut to an England which has just recently realized how nearly it was starved in the early years of the war, this assurance is not altogether convincing.

Furthermore, the super- militarists point out that the 35 per cent ratio is based on Empire tonnage and that the Dominions are under no obligation to render assistance to the mother country in time of war. ut such misgivings seem at the moment purely academic, however they may appear in the future.

There is, nevertheless, this feeling that England has "been done" in the bargain she struck, and enormous weight is placed on the building and replacement schedules. For it is conceivable that by rapid construction, while Great Britain is still bound by the Washington and London agreements, Germany can produce a modern fleet which will not only approach world partly in effectiveness, but greatly exceed the actual British naval strength in the North Sea.

• • • •

ON top of this wear of the ctual categories is superimposed a doubt of Germany's general willingness to fulfil any obligation. The recent and sudden revelation of German air supremacy over Britain made a deep impression on the public mind here. If this could be accomplished by piece-meal, under-cover, construction, what guarantee is there against a further disclosure embracing 200 submarines? It is all very well to say that "any agreement is better than none" but agreements which do not endure can not be included in the truism. So runs the "Big Navy" argument.

The Liberal criticism, on the other hand, approaches the matter from the point of view of European security. How is this agreement likely to affect the general level of armaments? Has Hitler achieved his first objective in naval control of the Baltic and will this be followed by more "Western" pacts, leaving Germany free to operate as she pleases in the East and Southeast? Is the British government's inconsistency, its complete reversal between Strest and London, a blow at the basic idea of collective security?

Cetrainly, it is a quaint conception that the creation of 51 new fighting ships by any nation is a hopeful start toward limitation and security in Europe. Furthermore, instructed opinion in Britain realizes full well that Europe is not limited to the West—that, in fact, the West is not the chief problem. It is axiomatic that no war will start ona Wesern front. And unless the concessions made to Germany under this agreement are used, and speedily used, as a basis for generzi action binding not only on the West, but on Europe as a whole, then those concessions will themselves engender the fears and competition which they were designed to avoid.

FROM the diplomatic point of view, too, it is feared that the success of the recent negotiations may develop a boomerang quality. To scold Italy for theratening to flout the league—then to seem to flout i oneself; to condemn Germany for repudiating the Versailles Treaty—tneh three months later condone her repudiation, those precedents are dangerous. England is realizing that now, and a large section of British public opinion has come to regard the present naval agreement from a purely pragmatic standpoint. The means were subject to criticism; the fond hope is that the end will justify them.

During these first bursts of interest in the new agreement the Liberal critics and the advocates of security-through-arms have been sufficiently vocal to permit the press to overlook a most curious phenomenon. On this particular matter his majesty's opposition is not in opposition. The Socialist Party, which has made "peace and security" into a household phrase, has had nothing whatever to say about this measure, which probably affects both security and peace more than any other since the Washington agreement.

In the same period last year, the total was $5,364,179,904. June clearings of $1,045,737,601 were slightly below the total for May, but greater than in June of any year since 1931.

Prose Around the World

IT is one of John Cowper Powys' axioms in "The Art of Happiness" that we should stabilize ourselves, give ourselves core and center, with an acutely aware enjoyment of the four great elements as they touch our daily lives. Fire, air, earth, and water—they may reach us in a cigarette, in the lift of wind before a summer storm, in the feel of sod beneath your head on a picnic afternoon, in the sudden shock and pang of an ice-cold shower. And the sensing of these, says Mr. Powys, is our birthright and should be our continued joy.

The wealth of prose in the world is no less a part of nature, springing up as an end-product of these same elements—and to know prose, touch it intimately and take it bone-deep into us, is to gain the same central and richening quality. A man, in short, who has Thucydides, Voltaire, and Swift at the back of his mind can never be quite unhappy.

It is the extraordinary richness which we all possess in literature—often, alas, as unconsidered as the fine shapes of trees—which strikes me most forcibly in Carl Van Doren's astounding garner of world writing: "An Anthology of World Prose" (Reynal & Hitchcock, $3.50).

Here are 1,100,00 words in 1,600 pages, coming from over 200 authors in 19 languages, exhibiting 40 centuries of man's best writing from Lao Tzu to Thomas Wolfe. An anthology of such scope and kind has never appeared before. There is no use denying the heady effect of finding Confucius tucked into covers with Benvenuto Cellini, Plato's "The Symposium" with pages from Karl Marx, Persian tales with Irish plays, Sir William Malory with Max Beerbohm, Cicero with Rabelais, and Martin Luther with James Branch Cabell. Familiars are there in force—from Bible passages to Sinclair Lewis' first rising curtain on George Babbitt—and for those who like to be led into new fields Mr. Van Doren has brought in such things as a tenth century Japanese's remarks on his countrymen's poetry, a fourteenth century Arabian observations on history, pithy paragraphs from the Sanskrit, and parables from Sa'di, the thirteenth century Persian who seems to have lived to the ripe old age of 107.

• • • •

WHAT I can't even imagine is the labor Mr. Van Doren must have expended on this collection. "With the whole of English prose literature before me, translated or original, I set out to make an anthology which could be read naturally and enjoyably," he writes in the preface. To grasp the "whole," even by outline, is a feat of no mean order. And I salute the further accomplishment of selecting from that immensity a series of excerpts and a generous number of complete pieces of work (from "Aucassin and Nicolette" to Chekhov's "Cherry Orchard" and James Joyce's, "The Dead") which do attract us at first sight and hold us with their vitality. For huge as the book is, it is one you will want to read, ultimately, from cover to cover.

The equivalent in bulk of 12 novels, note the publishers, for $3.50. My one carping point is the fact that most of us would have paid 50 cents more to have had the book upon better paper—the impressions on the other side of the page come through slightly and produce a confusing grayness.

But that won't bother the true respecter of literature, who finds spread out before him here the wealth and endless nourishment of world prose.

Traveling By Train

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

IT is really a very good way to travel; it is less dangerous than the automobile or the airplane; one can beguile the time by reading; one can get up and walk about, eat a meal comfortably in the dining-car, and take an occasional 40 winks.

I am usually a consistent reader of books on trains; the light is good by day or night. I suppose in America I must read a hundred books every year on trains. But when I travel through unfamiliar scenery, then I look out of the car window.

We have recently made several train journeys in Europe, and each one was an unalloyed delight. One may travel first, second, or third class. People used to say that only lords and fools travel first-class; but I have not heard any one make that remark for the last 30 years. If one can afford it, it is well worth the extra money to travel first-class; just as in America, I know of nothing that gives more value for the money than a Pullman.

In travelling first-class, the compartment cannot be crowded, because there is room for only a few; and very often two people will have the whole compartment. I prefer the first-class compartment, with a seat by the window, to the Pullmans they have in Europe.

We have enjoyed every moment on these trains. You reserve the two corner seats by the big window by paying a slight fee. We left Bremen at about 9 in the morning and reached Munich a little after 8 in the evening. Now, this all-day journey was not tiresome for one moment. The German first-class compartments are better than either the French or the English. We had the compartment to ourselves. It was beautiful weather and beautiful scenery. Spring was in its full splendor; all the fruit trees in bloom. In the afternoon we traveled along the banks of the river Main, and saw old castles and ancient churches.

• • • •

Our next train journey was from Munich to Cologne, leaving Munich at about half-past 9 in the morning, reaching Cologne a little after 5 in the afternoon. Here after the weather was perfect, and in the afternoon we were on the edge of the Rhine, and I know of nothing more beautiful than that. Years ago an American lady said the cathedral at Cologne was very beautiful, but that it was a pity they built it so near the railway station.

Our third railway trip was from Cologne to Paris, going through Belgium, passing half a dozen cities famous in history. Our fourth was from Paris to London, by way of Boulogne and Folkstone in order to avoid the Continental Pullman. By good fortune, the English Channel was as calm as a pond; and I shall never tire of the railway journey from the coast to London, through England's green and pleasant land.

• • • •

And now that we are in London, we shall sleep here every night, and use the trains by day. England is so small and the trains are so very fast, that one can take early breakfast, go by train 200 miles, spend the whole day at that destination, take the train back, and dine in the London hotel. And the pleasantest of all ways to travel is to travel without any baggage.

I like trains.

Old Letter Tends to Refute Lincoln-Ann Rutledge Romanc

Correspondence Is Found by Recipient's Nephew in Ancient Trunk.

By the United Press.

Springfield, Ill.—Recent discovery of an old letter from the late R. J. Onstott to the late R. Y. Kincaid, of Athens, near here, both early Illinois settlers, tends further to refute the old story of the Abraham Lincoln-Ann Rutledge romance, according to local Lincoln students.

The correspondence was discovered by a nephew, A. S. Kincaid, of Athens, while delving through a forgotten trunk. The letter follows:

"Mr. R. Y. Kincaid,

"Athens, Ill.,

"Dear Sir:

"Through Mr. W. I. Kincaid, of Mason City, I learn you have a life history of Lincoln written by William Herndon, the first edition not his revised, as I have that in two volumes. I mean, the first edition. If you have it I should like so much to see it and read it. I suppose you know who I am. R. J. Onstott.

Born at New Salem, December 6, 1830. That was before Abraham Lincoln came down the Sangamon River with Offet on the flat boat on his first trip to New Orleans.

"I know the publishers destroy all of this first edition. I know there is not anything in the first edition about the story of Ann Rutledge being Lincoln's sweetheart. This could not be, for my father, Henry Onstott, bought the tavern of James Rutledge in 1833 and James Rutledge moved down to Concord, six miles north of New Salem, and the Rutledges did not live in New Salem after that.

"So all the story is a lie and of whole cloth. It is to refute these lies that I want to get the first edition. I remember very well when Ann Rutledge died. My father went to see her and the family about two weeks before she died. I know that Lincoln did not go to see her once at her request as others did but he did go to her funeral. The Salem Chautauqua got me to plat New Salem and publish it to preserve it and I will send you a copy of it and ask you to accept it and have it framed.

"Very respectfully,

"R. J. ONSTOTT."

Upward Trend In All Classes Of Insurance

Present Problem Facing Companies Is How to Invest Funds.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 29.—A favorable general trend in the three main classifications of insurance has been discerned by analysts on the heels of the moderate economic recovery of the Nation.

With the amount of life, fire and casualty insurance in force measured in the high millions, the problems presented by the depression have been dimmed by recovery, but recovery in turn has brought new problems to the giant organizations.

Insurance experts declare the companies were faced with the task of writing policies in the past few years, but today a new dilemma of what to do with their money is becoming evident.

Last year the three branches gained in the amount of insurance written, it is estimated, and commentators believe the favorable volume is holding up well in the current year.

In an analysis of the distribution of investment assets of 20 fire insurance companies, Standard says 1934 was marked by an increase in cash and Government bonds as well as industrial common stocks. With that change in investment policy, commentators have assumed the fire companies have faced the problem of investments and altered the position of their money accordingly.

Investment experts have prepared many lengthy surveys on the employment of huge reserve funds, but the problem remains acute from the standpoint of earnings. Almost all classifications of interest rates on money have been lowered, with the gilt-edge lines, as usual, in the smaller brackets.

Since lower interest rates mean reduced earnings for insurance companies and lowered earnings spell trouble, the heads of insurance investment divisions have labored long and hard over their problem.

Banks in Shape For Financing U. S. Industries

Prosperity Continues to Elude Bankers, Says A. B. A. Organ.

New York, June 30.—There is abundant evidence that banks are in an unusually favorable position to finance a period of industrial growth, says the current issue of "Banking," published by the American Bankers Association. As to general conditions the review says in part:

"In spite of seasonal considerations and in spite of the abandonment of the NRA, the general index of business was showing good resistance even in early June. Building construction, coal output, and commodity car loadings have been holding up particularly well, making up in a considerable measure for the tapering off of automobile production. The improvement in residential building is the most heartening sign on the business horizon.

"When and on what scale we may expect the fall recovery to set in will depend to a large extent, it is now obvious, on the pick-up in the automobile industry, which is just now running at a considerably slackened rate compared with the spring.

Output of automobiles was 70 per cent heavier in the first quarter than it was a year ago and April provided the largest single month since August, 1929. The fall demand for new cars will depend in a large degree on the crop situation as reflected in farm purchasing power.

"One of the most interesting developments in the field of finance in recent weeks has been the continued strength in the stock market, which in June moved into new high ground for the present year. This is partly a reflection of the better earnings of business in 1934 and the first quarter of 1935, partly in anticipation of possible inflation.

"Prosperity continues to elude the banking community; and it seems likely that it will do so until money rates stiffen considerably. When this will be is not easy to predict in the light of the figures of the Reserve System, with its picture of immense unused reserves in the hands of the banks."

Men, being men, can not tell you very much about women. For instance, to the young-man-in-love the opposite sex is all sweetness and light; the bachelor, who has dodged the ladies for years, believes them to be scheming minxes, and the married man is probably afraid to tell you what he really thinks.

Therefore, to get a true opinion of women, you must go to a woman for your information . . . and so we've gone to Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of The Washington Post's woman's pages, to find out about those lovely and sometimes sweet creatures who do so much to make our lives happy and miserable. And Miss Lindsay certainly tells us, and all other readers of The Post, about "The Gentle Sex." You'll find her impressions of her sisters . . . and brothers, too . . . in The Post each Sunday morning to entertain . . . and educate you. Each week she writes this amusing, intelligent column which so satirically punctures so many of our illusions, and which gives us an insight into the devious ways of women.

For example, she outlines the character of Tactful Tillie, who never comes right out and tells her friends they are getting fat. Oh, no! Tactful Tillie merely sniffs, "Are'nt you getting a bit stout, dearie?" Tactful Tillie, Miss Lindsay also reveals, prides herself on being able to find out disagreeable things by a method which is practically painless . . . to her.

Or Miss Lindsay describes the conversation at the Sunday dinner table; and her description is as true to life as the family laundry line. You can recognize Uncle Henry, who wants to talk politics, and Aunt Susan, who simply must tell Cousin Mary about those perfectly darling little needlepoint footstools she saw downtown for only $2.98, or, if you read carefully, you might recognize yourself!

We are sure that Miss Lindsay's sardonic humor will please you as much as it pleases us . . . we think it's one of the best features in The Sunday Post. Gently, oh, so very gently, the barb of her wit penetrates . . . but you're laughing so much you don't mind the sting.

"The Gentle Sex," which has become one of the best-liked columns in The Sunday Post, may be found each Sunday morning on the woman's pages of Miss Margaret Freeny and Miss Alice Freeny have been spending the week-end as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Powers, of Pittsburgh, Pa., in their lodge at Ligonier, Pa.

New Cosmetics Hide Pimples Pending Cure

Make-Up May Be Applied Over Flesh-Tone Cream and Powder.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THAT HORRID little blemish that pops out to spoil it all! And just when you're looking forward to a quiet but all-important luncheon or dinner and dance with a charming new masculine admirer—an afternoon of bridge with a crowd of feminine friends who will scan you critically from head to toe—a gay party where it's so important to look you very best. And a little blemish spoils it all!—

Whatever the occasion, no need to let it be ruined by one little bit of ugliness peeping out at the world. A certain beauty specialist has waved her cosmetic wand and produced an ingenious preparation designed to help us meet such emergencies gracefully. This is a marvelous little cream which actually conceals blemishes, and for that matter, redness, and nose shine.

A tiny bit of it is all you need. Simply smooth this on lightly with your finger tip and it forms a perfect flesh-colored film over the offending spot.

When you have dusted it lightly with powder, your skin will present a smooth, flawless glow of loveliness—and even the most critical eye won't discover "shine" or blemish!

One grand thing about this welcome little beautifier—you can make up right over it. For instance, if the blemish mars your cheek, smooth on the cream—remember just a speck of it is sufficient—and then pat on your rouge.

Hints on Blackheads.

Loads and loads of women have bad skins because they do not understand how to treat them scientifically. To them blackheads are little pests to be forced out by squeezing. Even hard spots under the skin they tackle in the same crude manner. And the result? Pimples, irritations, and subsequent scars.

How then, do specialists attack the blackhead problem? Almost unanimously they advice melting them away. Soften them, and stimulate the skin so that it may of its own accord throw them off.

Next, how to do this? One way—and unless your case is pretty drastic, you're bound to be successful—is to use a certain well known and highly recommended stimulation cream. This perks up circulation, softens the extraneous matter that is clogging the pores, and with consistent use, aids you in liberating your face from the enemy camp.

Even after you've used it once you'll see an improvement. It has real pick-up qualities, and leaves your skin fresh, and with a smooth transparent look.

Now is the time to buy the cream, for all this week in a downtown store any purchase of $1.50 in this line of cosmetics brings you free of charge a delightful little trial kit consisting of all-purpose cream, nourishing cream, skin tonic, and powder base.

Packet Perfume.

Every woman knows that a few drops of perfume applied as needed will work wonders in bolstering self-confidence. The need for such stimulus arises most frequently away from home. Up to now, no completely satisfactory method of purse transportation was available. But with the advent of this—it's called "Stow-away"—all is different. Now, a woman may safely carry a little well of fragrance in her pocket or her purse to enjoy whenever and wherever she may be.

"Stow-away" undoubtedly takes the laurels as a neat and attractive arrangement for purse transportation of perfume. It is a graceful, round, fluted bakelite case containing a glass cylinder filled with perfume. A convenient glass applicator is affixed to a secure screw-cap. Leak-proof, feather-light, "Stow-away" is a companionable, indispensable little accessory. It comes in lovely fresh costume tones of blue, red, green and ivory—one for each ensemble and complete with perfume.

Second Spring.

WHEN THE HEART of the world was warmer,
And Pan was the dream of men,
The trail of his silver hoof-prints
Led over field and fen;
Then the far-off sound of his piping
Was heard when the moon was clear,
And the flame from the ancient heart-fires
Leaped high as his steps drew near.

Now the heart of the world is colder,
While the eyes of the world are blind,
And the embers only smoulder
Banked deep in the ash of mind.

But some day there will break a morning,
Through the shuttered panes of the town,
When a breeze from the outer spaces
Will level the ashes down;
When the fires of the heart new-kindled
Will burn on our hearths as then,
And Pan will come back to our gardens,
Playing his pipes again.

Yes, the heart of the world is colder,
And the eyes of the world are blind,
But its embers only smoulder

Calendar.

THEY BLOCK it out in squares
And letter it
In neat black figures, plain and definite,
Not knowing it is made of sun and rain,
Or argent evenings and opal dawns,
Of meetings . . . and of partings cold with pain,
Of stars and dusk, of men and leprichauns.

If I made calendars I should have two;
One like a quilt to hang upon my wall
With snips from days of every kind and hue,
All stitched with wind and wings and waterfall;
And one, yes, I confess, inscrutably
In mistic figures of futurity.

Who Looks for Long?

WHO LOOKS for long in the green heart of a tree
With its bright sweeping, its dark shadowed blowing,
Will have revealed to him the secret things
That only trees are knowing.

It will communicate its inner strength,
The poise, the fortitude that has been given
A tree that draws its blood from the good earth,
Its every breath from heaven.

Who looks for long in the green heart of a tree
At its far reach, its sweep, its shadow lengthened,
Will find he can arise and go his way,
His mind and body strengthened.

Dreams Go By.

Dreams marching gallantly, while far drums roll,
Dreams riding swiftly, certain of their goal,
Dreams passing slowly, with a wistful sigh;

Dancing dreams, prancing dreams,
Dreams that laugh and sing,
Tender dreams, slender dreams,
Dreams that weep and cling,
Dreams that hurry quickly past,
Dreams that linger, fade at last,
Elfin dreams, gay winged and fleet,
Sturdy dreams on plodding feet . . .

No dreams have paused to heed my far-flung cry;

What Today Means

IF JULY 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. until noon, from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 6:15 to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m.

Procrastination is an evil not to be indulged in this day. Tendencies toward carelessness may be noticeable, and if not guarded against, losses are apt to follow any giving in to them. "The truth, the whole truth, and nothing bu the truth," will be the only solution for most problems, which may come up during the day. Executive ability will be required for the stimulation of trade, so those occupying important positions will do well to keep mentally alert.

If a woman and July 1 is your birthday, you are probably very efficient in either home or office work. Be careful your surplus energy does not set too fast a pace for those thrown into close contact with you, as it may be very trying on some of your friends, or relatives. Avoid expecting too much from those you are closely associated with, and you will probably save yourself from being deeply disappointed. Remember that friendship, like many other things, can not stand too great a strain, so never jeopardize it by testing it until it reaches the breaking point. Interior decorating, tea room, specialty shop, or office detail, as well as statistical research, may be just the right line of employment for you.

If a man and July 1 is your natal day, you have the knack of knowing what to do under most conditions and circumstances. Law, politics, publishing, or newspaper work, acting, as well as selling, are among the avocations for which you should be admirably fitted.

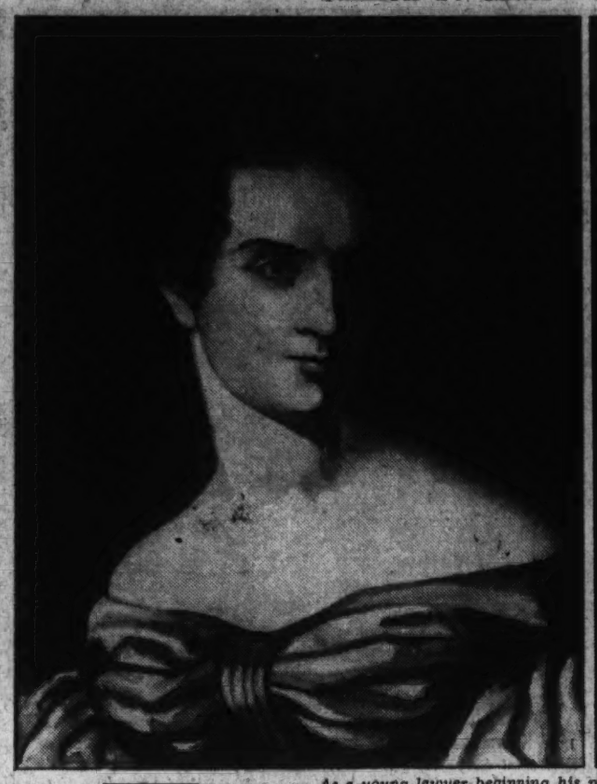
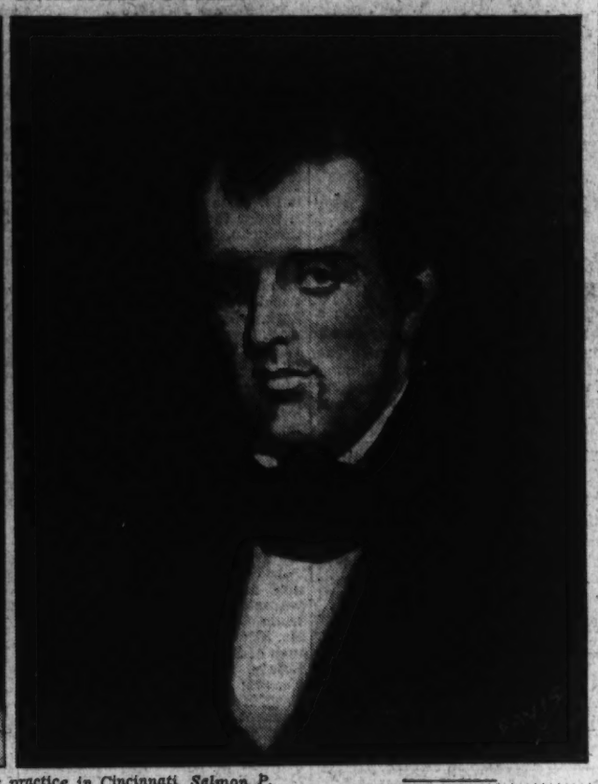
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Salmon P. Chase—Catherine Garniss.





As a young lawyer beginning his practice in Cincinnati, Salmon P. Chase met Catherine Garniss. For both it was a romance of first love. Their marriage was of brief duration. Catherine died, leaving behind her an infant daughter who became the famous Kate Chase.

Chief Justice's Young Wife Died After Birth of Daughter.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

AMERICAN CITIES cherish with a peculiar tenacity the memories of outstanding romances in their history, and Cincinnati is no exception. In the city's annals appear the records of romances that have enriched the city's life from its early days to the present.

In one of these half-forgotten romances of American history which had Cincinnati as its scene appears the names of Salmon P. Chase, a great Chief Justice of the United States, and a young girl, Catherine Garniss, whose brief wedded life was an example of marital felicity.

In this romance was pictured the deathless beauty of first love. Although Chief Justice Chase, after sincere mourning for his first wife, married again, yet it is easy to believe that ever treasured in his heart was the memory of his first wife.

A hundred years and more have passed since this romance happened. Yet it has not been forgotten. For Washington it has more than usual interest because of Chief Justice Chase's long residence in his later life and also because the close friend, confidant and Cupid's aid was Joseph Longworth, of Cincinnati, grandfather of the late Speaker of the House of Representatives, Nicholas Longworth. Joseph Longworth was a worthy advocate to have on one's side on any matter, for Cincinnati remembers him for sterling qualities, his philanthropies and his virtually free gift to the city of Eden Park and his liberal endowment of the Art School.

Of New England Stock.

Salmon P. Chase was of sturdy New England stock, born in Cornish, N. H., of a distinguished line. The opportunities in New England in the early part of the nineteenth century did not appeal to his ambition, and he chose Cincinnati as the spot where his life efforts toward achievement—and perhaps fame—were to begin. He had studied law in Washington under the great William Wirt and had had chances to begin his practice under his aegis in Baltimore. But Chase, with the mental integrity of the Pilgrim strain, preferred to win on his own.

Ohio was not unknown to him, for as a lad he had passed some time within its borders as the adopted son of his uncle, the Right Rev. Philander Chase, a noted bishop of the Episcopal Church. In fact, he had attended school in Cincinnati when his uncle was the president of the newly founded college. The mental fare in the uncle's household was of a severe classical nature and we hear of young Salmon delighting his uncle's scholarly heart with an oration on St. Paul and St. John couched in the original Greek. Bishop Chase believed in thorough discipline of the young, and Salmon yearned for the greater freedom of his widowed mother's home in Dartmouth, N. H. So he went back East and attended Dartmouth College, which he left at 18 with a diploma and a Phi Beta Kappa key.

At 22 he had chosen Cincinnati as his own. It had been a five-day journey from Washington, by stage coach and boat. Sentiment was far from his thoughts. His plans called for, first, a law practice that would make him independent and then a political career. The epitome of his life plan he summed up in these words: "This world is a vast theater upon which each man has a part allotted to him to perform and duties to discharge which connect him closely with his fellow man. I confess and desire to be distinguished, but I desire more to be useful."

For three years Chase plodded along on the steep way to legal fame. He did not remain an entire recluse from the social life of the city, however. His friend, Joseph Longworth, saw to that and he met many interesting people at entertainments in the spacious drawing room of Belmont, home of Mr. and Nicholas Longworth 1st.

No doubt many bright eyes gleamed when Chase discussed literary papers brilliantly at the meeting of the Semicolon Club with an aptness in which his classical training stood him in good stead. A belle here and there had touched his young heart, too, for Mary Merwin Phelps in her charming biography of his daughter, "Kate Chase, Dominant Daughter," quoted this rather glowing description of one of the fair maids who had captured his passing fancy in which he declared "Her rare ability to please without art, her face one a sculptor would choose for a model, form slight and frail but exquisitely molded. Her motion free as the summer breeze, soft and gentle as sweet music—sweeter, because like the tones of the wind harp they are unsubjected to the rules of art."

Romance Flourishes.

But all this was forgotten when he was presented to Catherine Garniss, a New Yorker by birth and education, who had lately come to Cincinnati with her parents. Her charms were undoubted and soon the beaux of the city were calling her "The Queen of the North" in the rather expansive mode of the period.

Chase, however, feared that perhaps Catherine might be worldly minded. His pious uncle had taught him to avoid such traits in the girl of his choice. Their romance flourished after a time and friends saw that this was a serious affair. Both were popular and it was a happy couple who stood before the Rev. Lyman Beecher, pastor of the young bridegroom.

In 1835 a child was born to them, a daughter. The mother did not recover quickly and during the two weeks of her convalescence they discussed many times the naming of the child. Meanwhile he was called to Philadelphia, thinking his wife would recover and upon her wishes for his departure to attend to an important case. During his absence she died. While Mr. Chase waited in Wheeling for a boat to hasten him back to her bedside, the news was brought to him.

After the funeral he visited her grave daily, torn by a fruitless and unfounded remorse for leaving her, when she was ill. In his private record he wrote: "One thought filled my mind, one emotion occupied my whole soul, my great, my irreparable loss; my wife, my dear wife, gone, never to return. Oh! how I accused myself of folly and weakness in leaving her when yet sick."

Lawyer a Close Friend of Nicholas Longworth's Grandfather.

How TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Parrot Disease or Psittacosis.

DURING the past year psittacosis or parrot disease has again attracted attention, as more cases have occurred than at any time since the widespread incidence of the disease in 1929-30.

Young birds contract the disease readily, but, as a rule, the infection is not followed by an appreciable mortality. Most of them recover completely, with an immunity against succeeding attacks. However, they may harbor and distribute the virus rather generally and pass the infection on to human beings. Older birds are seldom involved in human contacts.

After the initial exposure to infected birds human beings exhibit the symptoms of psittacosis in from 7 to 14 days. At first the patient feels ill, has chilly sensations and pain is general over the body. Prostration is quite marked and the temperature ranges from 100 to 103 degrees F. Toward the end of the first week the symptoms are usually much more severe, with increased headache, constant demand for water and marked loss of weight. Restlessness is characteristic. As the disease progresses the abdomen becomes distended and the tongue is heavily coated. There is usually a slight cough. Frequently pneumonia enters the situation as an additional handicap.

The only neutralizing agent that has been suggested is convalescent serum, that is, serum from the blood of patients who have recovered from the disease. Inasmuch as no antitoxin has been discovered the treatment otherwise is largely symptomatic. In many respects the disease simulates typhoid fever. The heart must be supported with appropriate remedies.

Prevention consists in avoiding contact with birds that can harbor or carry the infection. The case is reported of an individual who brought into a household a bird that had apparently recovered from psittacosis. The owner at the time was convalescing from a mild attack of influenza. Human infection resulted in about 14 days, and although the symptoms resembled typhoid fever a definite diagnosis of psittacosis was made, as the peculiar virus forms were found in the patient's sputum. Furthermore, X-ray examinations of the chest and laboratory studies (which consisted of inoculating white mice with the virus) confirmed the diagnosis.

Epidemics are prone to go through an entire household, that is, to involve more than one member of the family. K. F. Meyer says: "Of 66 cases of psittacosis reported from California 25 (38 per cent) were in owners of large or small parrakeet aviaries or in members of their families." Meyer also observed that the parrakeet is, at the present time, the most frequent disseminator of this dangerous disease.

Success Secret Is Use of Small Utensils to Avoid Leftovers.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE YOUNG MARRIED woman with a husband to feed isn't the only person who is ensnared in this business of cooking for two. There are any number of young business women living in twos who are faced with the same difficult problem.

DINNER MENU FOR TWO.

Iced pineapple juice
Baked ham
Creamed potatoes
Buttered green beans
Stuffed green pepper rings with French dressing
Bread and butter
Baked cup custard
Iced coffee or milk

The first outlook is a rosy one—only two places to set and few dishes to wash. The trouble begins when you find that it is impossible for two persons to consume a leg of lamb in less than a week. The main problem, then, is one of planning and marketing.

Everything must be done on a miniature scale. Cooking for two requires small utensils. Once tried, you will realize that it is almost impossible to take a lone egg and beat it to a good froth if the beater is large and the bowl of great size. The first step to successful cooking for two lies in utensils of the right size.

Here is a list that has been prepared especially with small quantity cookery in mind. You may not need everything listed but there are several items that you shouldn't overlook. Small goes for every pot or pan on the list:—one casserole, individual ramekins or custard cups, 1 or 2 frying pans, several saucepans for cooking vegetables, 1 1-quart double boiler, one deep, heavy pot for deep fat frying and a wire basket to fit inside, muffin pans in sets of six, cake and pie tins, five or six inches in diameter, loaf pans for bread or cake, 1 cookie sheet, a set of metal skewers, a cup sized egg beater a set of measuring spoons in graduated sizes and a set of small mixing bowls.

Next comes the difficulty of modifying recipes to meet the demands of serving two. You will run into less trouble if you use a cook book that has recipes which are standardized for a certain number of servings. Say if the recipes serve six, it is a simple procedure to cut them down to fit the family of two. In many cases, you would simply use half the recipe, concluding that the extra portion would be in demand as a second helping for one or the other at the table.

If you are dubious about cutting a large recipe which calls for only one egg, rather than cut the egg in half use the whole egg. There are very few recipes in which eggs are used that won't be a success if a little larger quantity of egg is used that the amount required.

The menu for today has been planned for a family of two.

The baked ham of course is not a whole ham or even a ham butt. Buy a 1-inch-thick slice of raw ham. Brown it on both sides in the frying pan, then cover it with mustard, flour and brown sugar and stuff the top with cloves. Add a little water and cook, covered, in a moderate oven, 350 degrees Frahenheit, for an hour. It will give the same appetite satisfaction as a slice from a whole baked ham, but you won't be faced with the left-over problem for a week afterward.

The baked custard may be prepared by the following recipe, which is merely a standard recipe for six, which has been cut down to fit the requirements for a family of two. Bake the custard in individual cups.

Baked Custard for Two.

2/3 cup scalded milk
1 egg
1 1/3 tablespoons sugar
1/16 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon vanilla

Scald the milk. Mix sugar, egg, salt and flavoring and combine with scalded milk. Pour into custard cups, set in pan of hot water, and poach in a slow oven, 300 degrees Farenheit, until firm. A knife blade run into the center of the custard will come out clean when the custard is done.

Further information on planning and marketing for two will be found in Thursday's edition of The Washington Post.

Sheep Discounted As Insomnia Cure

If you have insomnia, whatever you do—don't count sheep. This is the advice of Dr. S. G. Evaugh, Denver psychologist.

The mental effort of counting sheep jumping over a fence is enough to keep any one awake, Dr. Evaugh believes. He points out that persons do not "put" themselves to sleep by sheep counting or any other process, but rather "allow" themselves to sleep. That, he says, implies a quiet mind, a healthy body and the ability to relax.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a young Washington housewife and one who is a habitual morning radio listener. For some time past I have been impatient and not a little annoyed with the heterogenous mass of stuff foisted on us poor defenseless women listeners.

Surely, as homemakers and (admittedly) as "the buyers of the Nation," we housewives deserve more intelligent, amusing and educational radio programs. The majority of housekeepers perform their daily household tasks in the forenoon and early afternoon hours of the day. It seems to me, therefore, that these are the hours which could be most advantageously used for the presentation of good radio programs.

Day after day one hears the same Victrola recordings and the same so-called "dramatic playlets" of life stories of women who suffer so nobly and so patiently that I for one must either give way to nausea or else snap off the radio.

* * * *

The cooking classes and recipes I find helpful, except for the prissy way in which they are delivered, and the drivel about keeping husbands happy by feeding. Any normal wife is alert to the necessity of keeping her husband well and tastily fed without having the fact dinned into her brain morning after morning. Then, too, the imbecillic comic generally heard on these cooking programs, who voices "oh's" and "ah's" at the slightest provocation over the "scrumptious" concoctions being "whipped up" could very definitely be dispensed with.

* * * *

I yearn to be treated by radio announcers as an intelligent, normal human being, yet they glibly reel off their spiel of extravagant claims for the products they are advertising, apparently assuming I will swallow them hook, line and sinker. For the most part, their claims are either impossible in the first place or highly improbable in the second place. I have even reached the state where I refuse to buy a certain product whose makers have, by their preposterous claims, grossly insulted my intelligence so many times I resent the very name of their product.

* * * *

This may sound like the letter of a crank. It isn't. I personally know many women who feel as I do, and I know there must be hundreds of others as well. What I would love to see organized would be a "Woman's Program," rather than an advertiser's program. One that would take up an hour a week, perhaps, and which would be carefully and thoughtfully planned for entertainment, instruction and enlightenment. Of necessity there would be advertising. Yet such advertising could be handled in such a way as not to antagonize the audience and to bring desired results for the sponsors.

* * * *

I would greatly appreciate your publishing this letter, or any part of it, in your column. I am a constant reader of your column and enjoy the discussions and contacts with human nature it affords. I would like to learn the reaction of your readers to this question of better radio programs for housewives.

Sincerely. FED-UP.

Constructive Ideas Asked.

DEAR FED-UP: I have brought your letter to the attention of a man who has worked with radio for years, compiling and presenting programs. He professed to find your foregoing criticism interesting and stimulating and said he would gladly give you a hearing if you have some constructive suggestions to offer for developing a radio program more to the liking of the majority of housewives. If you care to telephone me, or submit your name and address, I shall be glad to bring you together.

* * * *

If it can be shown that housewives generally are dissatisfied with the type of radio program being offered for their benefit, I have no doubt some effort will be made to satisfy the public taste. Perhaps other homemakers will give us the benefit of their opinion, now you have brought the subject up for discussion. M. H.

On the Air Today

The Fourth of July is going over with a bang this year if network program directors and sponsors have their way. By evening every citizen who hasn't left for a day at Aunt Minnie's should know that the birthday of these United States is being recognized by radio.

Some highlights: "National Capital July 4 Celebration" with Senator Harry F. Byrd, Marine Band, drum corps; celebration from Rock Island (Ill.) Arsenal; Kate Smith's own celebration with drama of signing of Declaration of Independence; half-hour concert by Los Angeles Philharmonic; official exercises from the City of Philadelphia at Independence Hall; annual celebration of the Society of Tammany, with Senator A. Harry Moore and Ferdinand Pecora; Capt. Henry's kaleidoscopic flashes of campaigns of the Revolutionary War; Danish-American Day from Copenhagen with Ruth Bryan Owen; dramatization of Canadian-American peace treaty signing in Canada's salute to the United States; United States Flag Association Independence Day Anti-Crime program; "Wake Up, America" by Frank Belgrano, National Commander of the American Legion.

That is a fair representation for the day. A full account of special programs for the Fourth will appear in this column on the morning of the Fourth.

Nearly 60 telephone operators had to be used last night to check the Washington votes of Maj. Bowes' amateur hour broadcast that travels to a new city each Sunday and gives the residents a chance to vote on the impressiveness of future radio stars.

Calls piled in on the operators until an hour after the broadcast was over, some 10,000 of them, according to Van Schreiber who was in charge of the program here. Favorite of Washingtonians seemed to be Marie Griths, the soprano who sang "Micaelas Aria." She had more than 1,500 admirers.

Looking now at the fare for today. The Independence Day influence is felt in Radio Joe's program, WMAL, 7:30, featuring the International Twins—Di Souze and Larrazola—who have been "visiting" the program now for some 250 weeks of Radio Joe's 357 weeks on the air . . . Los Angeles Times celebrates opening of its new building, presenting Will Rogers, Bing Crosby, Raymond Paige, George Jessel and other celebrities, WJSV, 4 p. m. . . . The junior editions of Gallagher and Shean will be guests of "Your Hostess," WJSV, 2 p. m.

Wendell Hall reports that his programs will originate from NBC's Radio City for three weeks if he can find his way about the maze of studios. Which, in a sense, is not so much of a gag as it sounds. We remember Wendell Hall's radioing of ten years ago very distinctly. In those days the "Red-Headed Music Maker" was plugging songs in the tank towns, dropping in at this studio and that, taking pot luck on time. Little Jack Little was Hall's contemporary in those days in the song-plugging game. As Prof. Fiddle-Dee Dee, the old "Red-Headed Music Maker," is heard Tuesdays through Fridays, WMAL, 10:15 a. m.

More about today: WRC begins a new air serial entitled "Girl Alone," the story of a little girl making her way in a big city—inaugural today at 3:30 p. m. . . . Rudy Vallee is guest of Harry Horlick and the Gypsies, WRC, 8 p. m. Jan Peerce sings "When a Gypsy Makes His Viilin Cry" . . . A medley of George M. Cohan's songs are featured by Morgan Eastman's orchestra, WRC, 9 p. m. . . "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is the Radio Guild's selection for today, WMAL, 3:30 p. m. . . . Canada's Dominion Day celebration with Gloria LaVey and Imperial Grenadiers Male Quartet, WMAL, 9 p. m.

"Lilac Time", WJSV, 9:30 p. m., offers in this column's modest opinion a handsome collection of songs: "It Was So Beautiful", "Don't Ever Leave Me", "Your Eyes Have Told Me So," "Why Was I Born," "My Little Nest of Heavenly Blue", "Why Do I Love You" . . . Other WJSV features include Fats Waller, 6:15; Fray and Braggiotti, 7; Pick and Pat, 7:30; Three Little Words, 8, and St. Louis Blues, 8:30.

Child Falls in Bath Tub, Stunned, Is Drowned

A 2-year-old colored girl, Geraldine Latimer, was drowned yesterday when she slipped and fell in a bathtub full of water at her home, 1325 Wallach place northwest. The child, police were told, was playing in the tub when she fell, striking her head. Stunned by the blow, she drowned before aid reached her.

Culbertson On Bridge

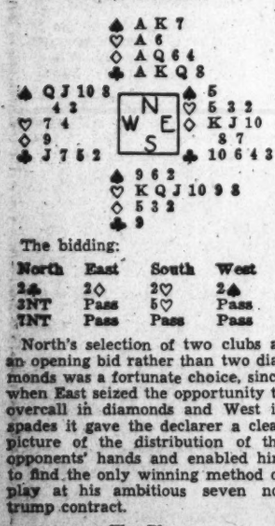
A Double Vienna Coup.

It seems to me particularly fitting and proper that a gentleman from Vienna should have played today's hand which involves a double Vienna Coup. The name Vienna Coup applies to that comparatively rare type of squeeze which can be effected only by cashing the high card in a suit instead of the usual squeeze procedure, which involves retaining high cards and squeezing the opponents so they must unguard their second round tricks. Since the Vienna Coup itself is rare enough, a hand in which this procedure must be followed in two suits to make contract is a rara avis, indeed.

North, Dealer.
North-South, vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2♣	2◇	2♡	2♠
7NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's selection of two clubs as an opening bid rather than two diamonds was a fortunate choice, since when East seized the opportunity to overcall in diamonds and West in spades it gave the declarer a clear picture of the distribution of the opponents' hands and enabled him to find the only winning method of play at his ambitious seven no-trump contract.

The Play.

East's opening lead was the five of spades and West's eight was taken by North's King. Since the bidding had indicated the diamond finesse offered no hope whatever, the declarer determined on a squeeze as his only correct course, but the squeeze could not be effective unless he first cashed both of his spade tricks. Therefore, although the Ace of diamonds play was a deliberate Vienna Coup, the play of the Ace of spades, which was also necessary before the heart suit was run, was forced in order to make the squeeze effective. But it was this necessity for making the same play in two suits which makes the hand so interesting.

After laying down these two Aces North cashed the Ace of hearts, followed by five rounds of hearts from the South hand, on which North discarded three diamonds and a low spade. On the last heart lead, West, to keep the card which would top dummy's nine of spades, was forced to let go of a club, and East was at the same time made to unguard the club suit to keep a winning diamond. The nine of clubs lead from dummy gave declarer the remaining four tricks.

Comment.

It is interesting to note that an opening club lead would have defeated this contract, since it would have robbed North of the necessary entry to his hand, but East can hardly be blamed for failing to find that double dummy opening.

The Federal Diary

Batting for Morgan Baker.

YESTERDAY marked the end of a three months' membership drive for the unions of the National Federation of Federal Employes. According to Miss Matilda Lindsay, national organizer who directed the campaign, gains in excess of 50 per cent were recorded throughout the city in N. F. F. E. units. The campaign of Local No. 2, under the direction of Robert W. Cushman, Library of Congress, was notably successful, she said.

The grand prize of the campaign, an all-expense paid trip to the national convention in Yellowstone Park, will be announced during the week by the D. C. Federation of Federal Employes unions. The most successful member of the Treasury Union, No. 262, will go to Atlantic City on July 20 as the guest of the local. At that time locals No. 2 and No. 262 will hold a low-cost all-expense trip to the shore resort.

Additional delegates to the annual meeting announced by their respective unions are Miss Gertrude Coyle, Finance Office, War, No. 261; Dr. J. Franklin Meyer, Bureau of Standards, No. 230; Lewis A. Rosafy, Adjutant General's Office, No. 372; Robert G. Pahlman, Navy Yard, No. 250; Richard Carter, Government Printing Office, No. 71. Alternates named are Victor L. Lowe, Bureau of Standards, No. 260, and William S. Kinney, Quartermaster General's Office, War, No. 261. Locals No. 2, No. 262 and No. 105 chose their delegates at earlier dates.

Outstanding summer activities of the N. F. F. E. will be the annual moonlight excursion down the Potomac on July 29. This event is sponsored by the unions here as a group. The recently organized Mechanics Branch of Local No. 2, composed of employes of the Park Service, will hold a river trip to Marshall Hall, Sunday, July 21. The feature of this outing will be a baseball game between teams chosen from the painters and carpenters and the plumbers and steamfitters.

Biological Survey.

Edward Alexander Preble, Wild Life Research Division, Bureau of Biological Survey, Agriculture, has retired after 42 years in the Government service. For some time Mr. Preble has been consulting naturalist on the staff of Nature Magazine and now will take over the duties of associate editor. Prior to his retirement, fellow employes in the Survey presented Mr. Preble with a testimonial volume

Mail Rush at FHA.

Mail at FHA has reached such enormous proportions that 300 additional clerks have been taken on for two weeks to clean up the deluge of correspondence. This tremendous increase of mail was caused by a circular letter issued recently by the Administration.

It was first thought that it would take three weeks to dispose of the huge pile, but it is now indicated that the work can be completed within a fortnight.

Some of these additional clerks are at the postoffice routing mail to FHA, and others are housed in several departments where extra space is available.

John Samuel Taylor (P), supervisor, Contract Clearance Unit, Corn and Hog Section, AAA, has returned from a honeymoon in the mountains of North Carolnia. He was married in Columbia, S. C.

Patents Granted.

Among patents of military or commercial importance recently issued to Government employes are:

To Herbert A. Gardner (P), War, for a broom attachment for securing a mop, duster or the like to the head of a broom. The device may remain on the broom after the mop, or the like, is removed.

To Arthur B. Shilling (C), and Cornelius Casey (C), War, for a device for packing a round of ammunition in a container. When the round reaches the bottom of the container, the device automatically releases.

'Real' Faiths Called Need At Institute

Dr. McDowell Holds Old Traditions Must Be Revised.

Gov. Peery, Sen. Byrd to Open Discussions at University.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., June 30.—The need of revising traditional religious beliefs "to meet the test of reality" was emphasized here tonight by Dr. John McDowell, of New York, in vesper services which opened the University of Virginia's annual Institute of Public Affairs.

Declaring that "reality is the keynote of all life," Dr. McDowell said, "The day of blind religion has passed. Men will not sell out their reason to hold their faith." He added that "no religion can long endure which does not rest on a thoroughgoing intellectual foundation and which does not receive the consent of the mind as well as the approval of the heart."

Discussions on a wide range of topics relating to domestic and world affairs listed for this week's institute program, will get under way tomorrow morning in five round table groups.

Gov. Peery to Speak.

Formal opening ceremonies are set for tomorrow night, when President John Lloyd Newcomb, Gov. Peery and Senator Harry F. Byrd will speak. An introductory address will be delivered by the institute's founder and director, Dr. Charles G. Maphis, who will preside.

Dr. Robert McElroy, professor of American history at Oxford University, leader of one of the week's forums, also will speak tomorrow night.

In his vesper sermon, Dr. McDowell, who is national secretary of the committee no social reform and industrial relations of the Presbyterian Church, contended that "the real problem of our day is not an economic one, or a political one or a social one; it is a deeply personal religious problem upon which the ultimate settlement of our modern problems, in the last analysis, depends."

The supreme duty of the Christian Church, he said, "is to inspire men to Christ-like conduct. Without it the most perfect system of political and economic organization will fail."

Asks Rational View.

Dr. McDowell contended that "earnest-minded people are still clinging to the essentials of religion that deepen faith in God, quicken love for man, create moral courage and nourish spiritual life."

Urging a rational interpretation of the doctrines of Christ, he said, "Men demand today a religion that is not afraid to reason and that they are not ashamed to believe, and they have a right to have it. Religion for today must involve no partition of life between thinking and believing, that is to say, religion must be rational.

"To say this is not to say that religion must be stripped of mystery or reduced to the level of a natural science in order to commend itself to mdeorn man. It is now obvious that all truth, whether approached by way of science, philosophy, art or religion, leads all serious students to a world of mystery, a sense of the infinite, a spacious region of idealism where one enters with reverence and awe.

"Instead of demanding that religion shall be reduced to a level of other knowledge, it will appear to all thinking men more reasonable to demand that all forms of knowledge shall be lifted into the realm of faith."

Sees Spiritual Lack.

Dr. McDowell singled out the lack of "true spirituality" as the "strongest foe within the realm of religion today."

Subjects assigned for discussion tomorrow include historical aspects of political and economic recovery, movements for economic security in the United States, current political and economic problems of continental Europe, Latin-American relations and the function of the church in the national life of today.

Speakers and presiding officers for the opening sessions include Dr. Roland B. Eutsler, of the University of Florida; Dr. Ellis B. Oberholtzer, Philadelphia author; Dr. Eveline M. Burns, of Columbia University; Dr. William Ogburn, of the University of Chicago; Dr. Ewan Clague, Philadelphia social worker; Dr. Charles W. Hackett, of the University of Texas; Anne Yates, of Charlottesville; Mrs. Helena Hill Weed, of Washington; Dr. J. Anton de Haas, of Harvard University; Dr. William E. Lingelback, of the University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, of New York, and Mrs. Elizabeth B. Ireland, of Richmond.

In the first of a series of institute radio broadcasts over a Nation-wide system tomorrow night, introductory talks will be made by Gov. Peery, Senator Byrd and Dr. Maphis. The program will be conducted by Dr. Thomas H. Reed, of the University of Michigan, chairman of the committee on civic education by radio.

Yellow Apple Raisers Favor Later Harvest

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 30.—A belief that yellow transparent apples, main early variety produced in this section, should be held until July 8 was the sentiment of the annual early-apple marketing conference of 25 leading growers from this State, Maryland and Virginia here yesterday. The meeting was sponsored by the West Virginia Horticulture Society.

The growers pointed out that the Illinois-Indiana transparents are now at their harvesting peak, and by the latter part of this week will be gone. By that time the transparent size will have increased sufficiently for an attractive pack of 2 inches to 2¼, making for more volume, better prices and better satisfied customers than the present stock which runs 2 inches or smaller.

The selling price when the harvest gets under way in this belt must be left to developments, the growers agreed. Some stock will be picked this week, Eastern Shore transparents will move next week.

Higher Prices Forecast.

Dr. A. B. Eagle, one of the large growers, predicted higher apple prices than last year's. He based his prediction upon improved business conditions and purchasing power; shortage of crops in competitive fruits and vegetables; the practical elimination of the "back-yard" or non-commercial production this year through failure of yield; the comparatively moderate size of the national crop ahead; and that the Northwest this year will produce less than last year, coupled with hail-damaged crop.

Estimates among the growers at the meeting said Berkeley County would produce fewer apples this year than last, Jefferson County fewer, Morgan about the same as last year's and Hampshire County more.

Tonnage of apples high enough in quality to pack should be about the same as last year's, indicated E. C. Sherwood, plant pathologist. Scab possibly will remove 10 per cent of the package class, he estimated. Scab, reports said, is worse in the Virginia belt, particularly south of Winchester than in this section, a State pathologist there estimating that 30 per cent of the Virginia crop might be affected.

The meeting named a committee to urge Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to reduce the color requirements on Wealthy varieties of apples from the 15 per cent required at present under U. S. No. 1 grade to "trace" as is now required of two other summer varieties, Duchess and Williams Early Red. The committee is composed of Cecil W. Wood, Hedgesville, chairman; Harry W. Miller, Paw Paw; Andrew Cohill, Hancock, Md.; Phil H. Cold, Winchester, Va.; R. L. Criswell, Chambergburg, Pa., and Frank Richardson, of Delaware.

Fruit Import Quota Established in Paris

Paris, June 30 (AP).—France's apple and pear import quota for the third quarter of 1935 was fixed today at 31,000 metric quintals (683,550 pounds), which is the same as for the corresponding period of 1934.

America's share has not been announced, but it will be about 12,000 quintals, the same as for the third quarter last year. Other agricultural and industrial import quotas appeared virtually unaltered, except for occasional seasonal changes.

Halsey Designated to Act For Lynchburg Judge

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., June 30.—Judge Aubrey E. Strode, who has been ill for some weeks, will not preside at the opening of the July term of corporation court Monday. Instead, Judge Don P. Halsey, of the city circuit court, has been designated by Gov. Peery to take Judge Strode's place.

Judge Halsey will impanel the grand jury Monday and will set cases for trial later during the term.

Kump Wing Sees Threats To Job Rule

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charleston, W. Va., June 30.—A variety of political aspects are reflected by activities in West Virginia in behalf of administering the State's portion of the Government's works progress program.

F. Witcher McCullough, of Huntington, erstwhile State NRA compliance director, and a member of the Democratic group headed by Senators M. M. Neely and Rush D. Holt, was recently appointed works progress administrator and, as such, is sitting at the head of the Federal unit in West Virginia.

In this position he will control patronage during the coming 12 months, a power that political circles believe to be overwhelmingly greater than that of the regular State Democratic organization, which generally controls State patronage.

May Seek Nomination.

Observers here think that McCullough's new job has placed him well on the road to the party's nomination for Governor in next May's primary, and, since the progress administrator is known to be ambitious along gubernatorial lines, it is believed that he will avail himself of the opportunity which his job affords.

The power that McCullough will control will be shared by Senator Neely, who is coming up for re-election next year, and, in his race, he will also have the support of Senator Holt; of Van A. Bittner, head of the United Mine Workers organization in the State, and of Herbert Fitzpatrick, of Huntington, Democratic national committeeman.

This growing power of the Neely-Holt faction, according to evidences at the State capitol here, is causing the regular organization leaders, including Gov. H. G. Kump, to "sit up and take notice," and some think they see signs of overtures from the Kump wing to make peace so that the party may be united next year. In return for peace, it is said, the Governor would ask only that he be let alone in carrying out his program as head of the State government this year and next year.

Also, it is said, he would be pleased to receive next summer a nomination for one of two seats to be vacated in the State court of appeals.

Holt Congratulated.

Among the evidence of peace overtures on the part of the Governor are his quick action in sending a telegram of congratulations to Senator Holt after he received his seat in the Senate 10 days ago; his acceptance of an invitation to attend, with Senator Neely, a banquet to be given at Jackson's Mill, on July 6, in honor of Senator Holt, and the appointment to positions in State-owned liquor stores of several of Senator Neely's friends.

Another point which many believe would force the regulars to join the Neely-Holt faction, is that the State government, which is looking to the works progress administration for aid in many projects, particularly roads, will have to apply through McCullough, and, it is said, the natural conclusion is that in dealing with the potential candidate for governor, the deals would be made as easy as possible for all concerned.

Father Sues Oakland For Sled Accident

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 30.—R. L. Kircheval, Oakland, Md., and the Mayor and Council of Oakland were named in a suit removed from Garrett County, and entered in the Washington County Court by Lawrence K. Dixon, jr., who is asking damages of $15,000 for alleged permanent injuries received in a sledding accident.

The suit contends that the Mayor and Council of Oakland, by proclamation, designated certain streets there for sledding purposes during the Christmas holidays of 1931-32 and that on January 3, 1932, when the youth was injured, there were no guards present on the designated street to warn motorists off. It is contended that Kircheval drove down one of the designated streets during hours set aside for sledding and struck the Dixon boy. The suit was brought in the name of the youth, a minor, by his father, Lawrence K. Dixon, sr.

Accord on Strike Coolly Received

By the Associated Press.

St. Charles, Va., June 30.—Coal miners of the southwest Virginia fields received with lack of enthusiasm word from John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, to continue work until August 1 until a wage agreement could be reached.

Although the workers intended to carry out their announced purpose of "sticking with Lewis regardless of the outcome," miners in this area felt another short suspension of the strike finally will result in doing them more harm than good.

Coal operators and general business, too, feared the effects of additional uncertainty, preferring either a definite settlement of differences or a strike.

Battle Park Murder Case Hearing Due

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 30.—The first move in the Government's effort to convict Earl Connor Williams, colored, of the murder of Fannie Kurz, who died several days after having been brutally beaten in Battlefield Park just south of here on the night of May 20, 1934, will be made in Richmond tomorrow when a Federal grand jury will be presented with the Government's evidence and asked to indict Williams.

Williams, 23-year-old itinerant, was arrested in Iuka, Miss., and, according to Federal authorities, confessed the crime. When brought here he led officers to the scene of the attack on Miss Kurz and her companion, George Milton Brown, and pointed to the spot where their automobile stood. Brown later recovered.

It had been intimated by Judge Luther B. Way of the U. S. District Court that a trial might be held as early as July 8. However, it is held likely that Williams will not go on trial as soon as that, as he has implicated Clifton "Lightning" Wright as an accomplice and it may become necessary to fully investigate this angle of the case before placing Williams on trial.

Federal agents are checking every detail of Williams' story to prove Wright's connection with the crime or eliminate him. They are confident that the man, now serving a life sentence for another crime, was a companion of Williams in Fredericksburg and believe that Williams and Wright were together when the crime was committed.

Several Federal men recently have been in Fredericksburg working on the case and in Richmond and elsewhere checking details.

Child Hurt in Blast In Serious Condition

Annapolis, Md., June 30.—Burns suffered by Anna Louise Horney, 4-year-old daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. Harry R. Horney, in an explosion and fire on a Navy aviation crash-boat at the Naval Academy yesterday morning were more serious than at first indicated and the child's condition caused grave concern today. Physicians said she has an even chance of recovery.

The child's father, a naval aviator, reported for duty at the Naval Academy yesterday. She accompanied him to the crash-boat yesterday morning. Soon after going aboard the coxswain, Seaman Alton H. Smith, started the engine, which backfired and ignited the girl's clothing. Smith grabbed the child and threw her into the water, then plunged in and rescued her.

Truck License War Threatens If West Virginia Fees Visitors

Adjoining States Notify of Reprisals When New Law Is Enforced.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 30.—A "truck license war" is expected to break in this section tomorrow, when State troopers start enforcing the new West Virginia law under which all "for hire" trucks from outside West Virginia coming into the State must obtain "permits," which range in cost from $20 for ton trucks up into the hundreds of dollars for the biggest units. Trucks hauling unprocessed farm and orchard produce are exempt.

Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and North Carolina have already served notice on the West Virginia road commission that if enforcement of this clause of the new law is attempted on trucks from their State, reprisals will be swiftly made, through requiring West Virginia trucks to take out licenses to enter those States.

Numerous inquiries have been made at the State troopers' office here as to the new law and possible consequences of the license "war" by local truckers, who in this section can scarcely move upon the highways without crossing a State line.

Heart-Felt Tribute Paid to 4-Footed Elk

By the Associated Press.

Yellowstone Park, Wyo., June 30.—After watching the round-up of a herd of elk in Yellowstone preparatory to shipping a carload to Virginia, E. W. Wilbour, representative of the Virginia game commission, arrived at a definite appreciation of the "nature of the beast."

Wilbour wired instructions to Virginia to prepare crates for the shipment of the animals. "Make the crates stallion high, bull strong, and pig tight," his telegram read.

The elk are to be turned loose in the mountainous region of Giles County in southwestern Virginia.

The Virginia Horticulture Society has asked Gov. Kump and Road Commissioner Bailey to arrange conferences with the other States to avoid the "war." Commissioner Bailey replied that, as the law was on the books, there seemed no way of arranging its abrogation now.

1 Dead, 12 Hurt As Truck Hits Bus in Virginia

Driver Turns Off Ignition Avoiding Fire After Collision.

By the Associated Press.

Petersburg, Va., June 30.—One man was killed instantly and 12 persons were injured, five seriously, in an early morning collision between a bus and a truck about 17 miles south of Petersburg today.

The accident occurred on Route 1, near Dinwiddie Courthouse. All the injured were brought to Petersburg Hospital and the body of the victim, John Evans, about 45, driver of the truck, was brought to a local undertaking establishment.

Witnesses said Evans lost control of his heavy machine which was loaded with chickens, and it crashed into the front of the bus. The driver of the bus, whose name could not be learned, swerved to the right in an effort to avoid the accident, and the vehicle climbed an embankment and turned partly over. The bus driver turned off the ignition before the crash occurred, preventing possibility of fire.

A. L. Guthrie was asleep atop the crates of chickens when the crash occurred. He was thrown clear and escaped with minor injuries. Those admitted to hospitals were expected to recover.

Panel Assailed Again in Trial Of Moonshiner

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., June 30.—Counsel for Tom Quesenberry, mountaineer charged with the slaying of Clarence J. McClary, Alexandria police officer on March 17, will at the opening of the case tomorrow in Loudoun County Circuit Court present a plea attacking the validity of the grand jury indictment and a motion to dismiss the venire summoned to try the case.

Similar legal tactics were employed by Defense Counsel Stilson Hall and Lucas D. Phillips when the case previously was set for trial. These former attacks upon the validity of the grand jury have resulted in two re-indictments, the first being quashed on the ground that the grand jury had not been drawn from a panel entirely known and certified by the court and the second nolle prossed on the ground that the jury had been picked entirely from bystanders in the court.

John Galleher, former Commonwealth's attorney of Loudoun County, and appointed special prosecutor by the court, will be assisted by G. Stanley Clarke, assistant attorney general of Virginia, assigned to the A. B. C. Board. Judge J. R. H. Alexander will preside.

It is indicted that Quesenberry will plead not guilty and take the stand in his own defense. Interest in the case is widespread, as it is expected that testimony will be offered by the prosecution to show illicit liquor operations in Loudoun County on a large scale. Quesenberry maintains the mountaineers' code of silence and will give out no information on those allegedly associated with him in the liquor business.

$2 Potatoes Goal Today Of Growers

By the Associated Press.

Painter, Va., June 30.—Potato farmers of Virginia's Eastern Shore, maintained a sharp vigil along the Maryland line today to prevent any efforts to run the potato blockade established Wednesday by the growers to force the price upward.

The blockade was not relaxed despite the fact no effort was made to break through during the night. About 50 men held the line during the night ,and that many were there today.

Meanwhile, evidence of greater cooperation among all interested parties was manifested as the results of the program showed themselves. It was the general opinion that the price would have dropped to $1 a barrel by tomorrow without the boycott.

Growers Adopt Slogan.

Spokesmen for the growers said today the price tomorrow will be "Two Dollars or Bust."

Dealers were warned today that if there were any sign of price cutting tomorrow the farmers would see to it that there were no potaters loaded for that particular organization.

A telegram was sent to Representative Bland (Democrat), Virginia, whose constituency embraces the Eastern Shore, saying:

"We, the potato farmers of Accomac and Northampton Counties feel that we have not been favored by the Administration. We feel that we have been neglected. The tobacco, cotton and peanut farmers have prospered, we are bankrupt. We urge upon you and the Hon. Marvin Jones, chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, to exert every effort during this session of Congress to have the Warren potato bill passed and made law. We must have control over the potato crop so that we can receive the cost of production plus a profit and live with the ordinary necessities of life. We beg of you and the Administration to have the bill passed at once."

200 Sign Telegram.

The telegram was signed by 200 potato growers.

Another meeting was called late today for all truck drivers to discuss the situation as it affects them. Spokesmen for the growers said if the truck drivers will play fair with them they will be treated fairly.

They were warned not to haul potatoes on consignment since that practice upsets the terminal markets.

The growers want potatoes sold before they leave the shore and want a stable price for the buying public as well as the farmers.

A complete embargo on No. 2 (cull) potatoes has been established. These will be left in the ground or used only for feeding live stock.

Digging and loading will be resumed tomorrow under a strict code set up last night by the growers in a mass meeting here. Another meeting has been called for tomorrow or Tuesday when further developments will be discussed.

Nats Play Like Champions to Down Yanks in Twelfth, 8 to 7

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Sidewalks of New York.

New York, June 30.

JACK JOHNSON is about as welcome in Harlem as the Ku Kluxers . . . he openly picked Carnera to beat Joe Louis and is reported to have bet $1,500 on Mount Primo . . . Louis' managers resented what they called Johnson's attempts to muscle in on their property rights in the Detroit lad . . . Broadway movie houses are showing the official films of the Louis-Carnera fight despite the announcement that no movies of the battle would be permitted . . . the New York State Athletic Commission feared if any racial strife was caused the movies would cause it . . . as they did following the Jack Johnson-Jim Jeffries affair in Reno 25 years ago.

POVICH.

Babe Ruth is being showered with offers to go into the restaurant business a la Dempsey . . . financial backers are hounding him on every hand . . . but the Babe, who is now dividing his time between golf and the races, is not yet ready to pull up his baseball stakes . . . he still thinks there will be a big league managerial job for him in 1936 . . . the Babe dissipated all hope that he would gain employment by American League headquarters as an ambassador of good will among the kids of the country by the manner in which he quit the Braves . . . the acrimony and bluntness of his farewell to the National League including his charge of "double crossing" was not kindly received by the baseball chiefs.

Little Abe Simon, the 250-pounder, whom Gene Tunney, Jock Whitney and Barney Gimbel pulled off a fruit truck as a heavyweight prospect, couldn't lick his lips if they set a bowl of gefuilte fish before him . . . he's too big . . . and too slow . . . the best prospect among the preliminary boys on the Louis-Carnera card were Buddy Baer and The Argentinian Breccia . . . the guy young Baer knocked out in the first round was carried from the ring unconscious and not revived until ten minutes later . . . people are beginning to talk about Buddy and some say he can lick his big brother right now.

PEOPLE are beginning to talk, too, about another five-cent World Series . . . what with the Giants making a runaway of it in the National League and the Yankees not doing so badly either . . . Ben Chapman is outstripping Lou Gehrig as the successor to Babe Ruth in the affections of Yankee fans . . . dull, colorless Gehrig might have made it if he came through with a sensational season . . . but in the year that he was expected to fill the role he is encountering one of his worst seasons at bat . . . the Yankees are ogling Jake Powell of the Nats . . . and are prepared to offer $50,000 for him . . . Griffith will counter with an offer to sell 'em Manush, or Schulte, or both.

Jim Londos' defeat by Danno O'Mahoney in Boston cost him a $20,000 guarantee he was to have received for his match here next week with Chief Little Wolf . . . but Promoter Curley reserved the right to substitute O'Mahoney for Londos if Jeemy lost the Boston match . . . which he did in some miraculous manner . . . the best explanation is that O'Mahoney is never supposed to lose in Boston . . . or that Londos was slipping as a drawing card . . . Anyway the Irish now have the world's wrestling and boxing champions . . . Notre Dame can make it unanimous this fall.

Broadway bookmakers never laid any higher odds than 4 to 1 against Braddock to beat Baer, according to Jack Doyle . . . until the day of the fight Doyle quoted Braddock at 3½ to 1 and raised it to 4 to 1 because nobody was betting on the Irishman . . . 6,000 complimentary tickets were issued for the Louis-Carnera fight . . . In New York it's a disgrace for a so-called big shot to be seen paying his way into a fight . . . they pull every string to get a pass even to the point of paying for 'em . . . if they can make the working press row, well, they've finally arrived as somebody of importance . . . they think.

Lynn Lary is bemoaning the loss of his favorite set of golf clubs. . . . they were burned in the fire that destroyed the New York hotel operated by his father-in-law, the daddy of the former Mary Lawlor, the stage star who is now Lary's wife . . . Red Kress is so intent on becoming a pitcher he has ordered a special toe plate . . . he pitched sans plate when he made his debut against the Yankees the other day . . . but he didn't miss the plate.. I don't think that's funny, either.

Rule Book Believed to Doom Yanks' Protest of Nat Victory

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The Yankees' official protest of today's victory by Washington is foredoomed to failure, according to the American League rule book.

Manager Joe McCarthy noted his protest to Umpire-in-chief Donnelly in the ninth inning when Heinie Manush was permitted to score from first base on an overthrow after an attempted steal.

The facts of the stiuation, as admitted by the Yankees are these:

With Manush on first and Buddy Myer on third, a double stead was attempted. Manush slid into second safely and Shortstop Crossetti who took Catcher Dickey's throw then returned it to the plate in an effort to catch Myer. The ball caromed off Dickey's knee and rolled to the edge of the Yankee dugout. Before Third Baseman Rolfe could return it, Manush had continued on to home.

The Yankees based their protest on the belief that a base runner is entitled only to two bases on an overthrow, thus causing Manush to be returned to third base. That provision, however, is only one clause in rule 65, section two, which reads:

Two Clauses Explained.

"In all cases where there are no spectators on the field and where a thrown ball goes against the stand or into the players' bench, the runner, or runners, shall be entitled to only two bases. When the throw is made by an infielder, the umpire, in awarding such bases shall be governed by the position of the runner of runners at the time the ball was pitched."

Thus the Yankees would appear to be sustained in their protest inasmuch as Manush was on first base when the ball was pitched, but an explanatory note to the dule heads:

"The latter part of section two means that if a runner has started to steal second base and an overthrow is made, the runner shall be given not only second, if , in the opinion of the umpire he might have made it, but two bases in addition."

Such an application of the rule entitles Manush to score.

Skippy Wins Boat Race in Delaware

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lewes, Del., June 30.—In the third race of the Lewes Yacht Club. Frank Carter's Skippy, sailed by Howard McIntire, swept home first in 46 minutes and 3 seconds with Douglas Fleming's Dipper taking runner-up honors.

The Dipper and the Skippy cut the waves nip and tuck over the five mile triangular course. Following a collision of the tow boats on the second lap, it was only after the most skillful handling seen here that the captains avoided a catastrophe.

Although Blue Pen 11 raced across the finish line in only 41 minutes and 25 seconds, it could not be declared the victor because it was entered unofficially.

The Just-Us, Cape Cod dory of Nellie Clifton, skippered by A. Marshall, jr., rated the best corrected time 35 minutes, but did not place first because an unofficial entry. The Extra Dry 12, foot sneak box of W. Virden Burton, Lewes, winner of the first two Sunday races, placed third. Other entries were alibi, Hazzard, Lewes, fourth; Blue Pen, No. 9, L. Dorsey, Wilmington, fifth; JustUs, sixth, and an unnamed new craft of Gould McIntire, Lewes, eighth Howard Teal, of Philadelphia sailing his new entry finished last.

Double Play With Bases Loaded Ends Wild Hitting Melee.

Umpire Reverses Self on Home Run as Bottles Fly.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 30.—A rapid-fire double play, the deadliness of which permitted no appeal, choked off the Yankees in the twelfth inning and lifted the Nats to an 8-7 victory in a turbulent ball game today.

4. The Nats took a 7-5 lead in With the bases full of Yanks, one out and the Nats leading by a run, Ossie Bluege dipped toward second base with the crack of the bat, scooped up Tony Lazzeri's steaming grounder, flipped it to Buddy Myer at second, and saw it transformed into a game-ending and game-winning double play as Myer's throw to first beat Lazzeri to the bag even as the potential tying run crossed the plate.

For 3 hours and 14 minutes the two teams battled to the finish in rain and the gathering dusk, and at the end it was announced that the Yanks had filed a protest.

The 15,000 fans in the stands worked up a severe case of jitters as:

1. The Nats stepped out to a 5-1 lead against Vito Tamulis in the first six innings.

2. A home run into the right-field bleachers by Myrl Hoag started the Yankee attack in the sixth.

3. Umpire in Chief Charley Donnelly called Red Rolfe's home run into the right-field bleachers with two men on base a foul ball, and then reversed himself, on the Yankees appeal, as a pair of bottles came hurtling out of the bleachers toward him, making it a 5-5 tie for the Yanks.

4. The Nats took a 9-7 lead in the ninth when Myer and Manush scored on a double steal after the ball eluded Catcher Bill Dickey when Myer crashed into him.

5. Manager Joe McCarthy announced that the game was being played under protest, as a result of allowing Manush to score from first on the play.

6. The Yankees staged a two-run uprising against Earl Whitehill and Jack Russell in the ninth that again tied the score at 7-7 and sent the game into extra innings.

8. The Yankees were jerked from the threshold of victory in the twelfth by that double play.

Bolton Out at Home.

Bolton was out at home on a close play as he attempted to stretch his triple into an inside-the-park homer, but given a 1-run lead Russell returned to the mound in the twelfth.

He was off to a discouraging start when Hill sent his first pitch to center for a single, and it was no help when he walked Rolfe. Chapman's sacrifice put runners on second and third with one out and Gehrig was passed for just such double play purposes as eventuated when Laz-

Trans-Mississippi Won by Goodman

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Ia., June 30.—Making a birdie 2 on the thirty-fifth hole, Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, today won the Trans-Mississippi Golf championship by defeating Johnny Dawson, of Chicago, 1 up in their 36-hole final match.

Dawson, one down at the end of the first 18 holes, squared the match on the thirty-fourth green with a 16-foot putt for a birdie three.

The Omaha player responded to the challenge with a great tee shot on the 115-yard thirty-fifth hole. He placed his ball less than a foot away from the cup for a cinch deuce. Dawson, 6 feet away, missed his putt for a halve.

Both players shot exceptional golf. Goodman turned in a 72, one under par, for the first 18 and Dawson was even with par. Dawson got a sizzling 70 in the afternoon and Goodman a 71.

Indians Split To Gain on Yankees

Beat Chicago, 3-2, but Then Are Snowed Under, 8-0.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, June 30.—The Chicago White Sox closed a four-game series with the Cleveland Indians with a vicious 8-to-0 victory today after losing the first game of a double-header, 3 to 2, their third loss of the series.

The pale hose smeared Mel Harder's winning streak in the sixth inning of the second game with six singles in a row, which, with the aid of an error by Knickerbocker, produced five runs.

Ralph Winegarner went in for Harder, but yielded six hits, one of which was Bonura's fourteenth home run of the season, in the eighth.

Cleveland scored its victory in the first inning of the first game when Galatzer singled, Knickerbocker was safe on Hayes' wild toss to second, Campbell doubled to score Galatzer, Trosky walked and Hale singeld to score Knickerbocker and Campbell.

'Alabama' Pitts Gets 2 Hits In Oriole Game; Average .158

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BALTIMORE, June 30.—Edwin C. (Alabama) Pitts completed his first week of professional baseball here today as Albany dropped both games of a double-header to Baltimore.

The Sing Sing alumnus received an ovation from the near-capacity crowd of 9,000, on his first appearance at the plate and drew another big hand in the fifth inning of the first game when he crashed into the center-field wall after making a brilliant running catch of a long drive by Pitcher Charlie Gumbert.

Pitts went hitless against Gumbert, ace of the Oriole staff, in the bert, ace o ftheOri loe opener, but colletced a pair in the nightcap to raise his meager batting average to .156. His fielding has been more impressive with an average of .897 resulting from three errors out of 29 chances. His arm, however, is reported a bit weak.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Nats, attended the game and appeared impressed by Ed Remerencko, the giant first baseman from Pennsylvania, who was farmed to Albany by the Nats.

Remerencko drove a hard single to center as pinch hitter in the first game, following his performance of yesterday when he doubled in a pinch.

Jack Redmond, who was shifted from the Nats to Albany last week, caught the opener and did a good job behind the bat, although he was unable to hit samely against Gumbert. Monte Weaver, former Nat mound ace, was knocked out of the box by a four-run Oriole assault in the first inning.

Hardy Tennis Fans Camp On Courts

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 30.—More than a hundred of England's most rabid tennis fans, packing camp chairs, had taken their places in Wimbledon's portals before dark tonight to assure themselves seats in the center court for the All-England matches tomorrow.

Four vital quarter-final struggles were listed with a quartet of the world's top-ranking stars scheduled to play—Fred Perry and H. W. (Bunny) Austin, of England; Baron Gottfried von Cramm, of Germany, and Jack Crawford, of Australia, along with the Americans, Sidney Wood, of New York, and Donald Budge, of California.

Austin Favored.

Much interest was attached to the singles duels of Wood and Crawford and Budge and Austin. Austin ruled the favorite over the unseeded Budge, but the latter's sensational play during the past week, his fluent backhand stroking and his power, has caused British experts to say:

"Wish we had a youngster like him."

The Wood-Crawford match promised a duplication of their thrilling five-setter in the 1934 Davis Cup interzone finals wherein Wood was victorious.

Australian Has Chance.

Perry was favored to top Roderich Menzel, of Czechoslovakia, and Von Cramm was favored over Vivian McGrath, the Australian. However, the Australian's chances of upsetting the dope were considered bright by some who remember his defeat of Wilmer Allison, the American ace, last week.

The American feminine stars, Helen Jacobs and Helen Wills Moody, were expected to encounter little difficulty in winning tomorrow's matches. Miss Jacobs plays Mrs. E. C. Peters, of Great Britain, while Mrs. Moody plays E. Cepkova, of Czechoslovakia.

Omaha Trains to Oppose Black Helen in Arlington Classic

Filly Is Seen As Tough Opponent

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Having proved himself equal to his famous sire in four of the turf's outstanding 3-year-old stakes, William Woodward's Omaha, son of Gallant Fox, today began preparations for the July 20 classic at Arlington Park, another race won by the Fox in his parade to the championship five years ago.

When Omaha led Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Good Gamble home by one and one-half lengths in the Dwyer at Aqueduct Saturday, it was the fourth race in which the son had followed in the footsteps of his illustrious daddy. Both carried off the honors in the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness, Belmont Stakes and the Dwyer with Omaha completing not only the first father-son combinatoion, but being the second horse to win the four stakes.

Records Nearly Identical.

The performances of the Fox and his chestnut offspring have been but slightly different. Gallant Fox won the Wood Memorial, a race in which Omaha was second. Omaha, however, tried for the Withers mile, finishing second, and stepped out of his division in a futile attempt to beat Discovery and King Saxon in the Brooklyn Handicap. The Fox did not go after either.

At a comparative time in his career, however, the Fox was far ahead of his son in the matter of money won because the purses he captured were much richer. Victory in the Dwyer boosted Omaha's winnings to $117,130, all but $3,850 of which was earned this year. It also left him only about $3,000 behind Azucar, leading money winner of the year, with victory in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

With the possible exception of E. R. Bradley's Black Helen, winner of the American derby, Omaha will face practically the same rivals he has beaten several times this year in the Arlington classic. Bradley's little filly has yet to match strides with the champion, however, and if she runs the kind of race she turned in at Washington Park, she may offer the Woodward chestnut a real argument.

After the classic, current plans call for Omaha to be shipped to Saratoga, where he will appear in the Travers stake in August.

Season Opens Today.

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—The climax meeting of Chicago's long racing season—31 days for $400,000 in purses—will open at Arlington Park tomorrow.

With virtually every standout thoroughbred in the country nominated for one or more of six rich stake events, championships in every division may be decided. Two-year-olds will have oportunities to establish supremacy in the Hyde Park and Lassie stakes and the $30,00 added futurity.

William Woodward's Omaha may put the clincher on 3-year-old honors in the $30,000 added classic, and the older horses will battle it out in the Stars and Stripes and Arlington handicaps.

The distance will be a mile and a quarter and the purse is expected to gross $40,000.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery, current sensation of the handicap division, probably will tangle with his consistent conqueror of last year, the 1934 3-year-old champion, Cavalcade, in the $10,000 added Stars and Stripes and Arlington handicaps. The former will be run Thursday at a mile and a furlong. The handicap will be over the mile and a quarter route July 27.

Harness Season Opens.

Toledo, Ohio, June 30 (AP).—The first meeting of the 1935 Grand Circuit racing season will open at Fort Miami track tomorrow night and continue through July 6.

At the Post . . .

Charles Town Race Track, June 30.

Dear Al:

It seems that the stewards read our column whether they like it or not. After waiting for almost a month for them to do something about the catch-as-catch-can starting methods, it only took a paragraph to bring action. I wish to report that Saturday's handling of horses was beyond criticism. The starts, especially those from near the stands, were excellent with the assistant starters ably assisting. They jerked horses' heads only when necessary and rather gently at that. In fact, except for a few hard looks from assistant starters, things went along smoothly Saturday until the last race. If you come up to the track tomorrow, you may hear a dull rumbling noise bouncing off the mountains. If you do, it will be the echoes of that eighth-race booing. Many believed that Bright Spirits won from Porphyry, the favorite, but the decision and the pay-off money, of course, went to Porphyryites. From where I sat it appeared that Bright Spirits HAD won. In fact, I thought that if the "dead heat" sign was displayed it would have been an injustice to Bright Spirits' backers. But, as I have said before, I'm in favor of making the photographic finish compulsory at every race track in the country. It involves some expense, it is true, but where "blood" money is involved the public needs more than the benefit of a doubt. At Santa Anita the numbers are not posted on any close finish until a film is developed. Two minutes after the race the official result is announced. Later the picture is displayed at the judges' stand for all to see.

BILL.

First—Sunny Susan defeated a field somewhat similar to this one and I understand that Shanks will do the riding. I expect a victory and a fair price. Doeskin was asked to go too far in those recent starts. Should go well at this 5 furlongs. Wise Money is far down the list.

Second—Baggage Trail gets another chance to graduate in this 4-furlong sprint. Palumbo is slated to ride and I expect no mistakes. Lady Nymph and Sun Camp appear to have an edge on the others.

Third—Silver Arch has shown speed on several occasions and should be a keen factor in this company over the short sprint route. Small Change and Noajoce for the rest. Lady Buck would be a threat if moved into the action.

Fourth—Dear Heart gets in with only 102 pounds and had worked well. Meets a fair field here but I'm going to string along. Gee Sharp has speed and with Eddie Smith up should be a factor. Khelaboo and Rock Miss must be respected.

Fifth—Buntino has been sprinting with success and seems ready to take a distance race of this kind. Will have the family rider, Booker, aboard. Porphyry as yesterday's victory shows and is a factor in any group at this route. Doubtless might have won the other day with a more intelligent ride.

Sixth—Bobby Folsom will win a race here on a fast track and I'm picking this spot. Needs only a good ride. Justa Teacher is the figure horse of the group. Consummation and Stylish Mack are possibilities.

Seventh—Light Action won for us last out and might come right back with another top effort. Follow On and Royal Lassie for the rest. Fergola and St. Christopher should be shot if they come close after those recent failures.

Welsh Takes D. C. Tennis Title, Shares in Doubles Victory

Keeps Crown By Defeating Bill Breese

Wins With McElvenny in Sparkling Five-Set Doubles Match.

By George Considine.

IT was "Barney Welsh Day" yesterday at the Columbia Country Club as the former Duke star swept to the District of Columbia tennis singles title and then paired with Ralph McElvenny to annex the doubles championship.

Under a broiling sun, the spindly-legged speed king from Rockville won his second consecutive District championship by completely outclassing the greatest dark horse in local net history, Big Bill Breese, to the tune of 6—2, 6—2, 6—3.

Slashing his power-house shots with willful abandon, Barney virtually cut to ribbons the man who upset more dope during the tournament than you ever thought could be possible. Truly a Rockville rocket, Welsh time and again raked the clay with such scorching pace that Breese seemed at a loss whether he was playing a match or disguising as a sharpshooter's target.

Only in the third set, when the Harvardite temporarily held his own, did Breese show the super-tennis of his earlier classics. No fewer than six times, with Welsh at match point, the husky southpaw pulled it back to deuce. His success was short-lived, however, for Barney, invincible in every department, wasn't to be denied.

Doubles Prove Best.

It remained for the doubles finals to produce the most sparkling tennis of the afternoon. With Welsh furnishing the kill and McElvenny as steady as Gibraltar, Bud Markey and Dooly Mitchell had the thousand spectators screaming with delight before they went down in a blistering five-setter, 7—5, 2—6, 6—3, 3—6, 6—4.

The play was marked by astounding rallies during which the entire quartet, stationed at the barrier, hit out with unprecedented vigor. When the break finally did come at 4—4 in the final set, Dooly Mitchell, evidently close to exhaustion, began to err. Welsh and McElvenny were quick to sense the situation and pounded Mitchell unmercifully to run out the necessary two games.

Louis I. Doyle, president of the Washington Lawn Tennis Association, presented trophies to the winners and runners-up in both divisions.

Orange Smothers Staunton Nine, 14-0

Tisdale Allows Only 3 Hits, Utz Stars at Bat.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orange, Va., June 30.—Paced by Louie Utz and Kessler, the Orange County team defeated Staunton at Gordonsville today, 14-0. The locals started in the first with a five-run outburst, result of two hits and six errors, the Staunton inner defense crumbling completely. Orange scored once in the second when Utz slammed the first pitch for a home run, and added one each in the third and fourth, two coming in the sixth. Four more were added in the eighth.

Tisdale, for Orange, allowed but three hits, two of the scratch variety. Only one Staunton man reached third base.

Orange goes to Staunton Tuesday.

Chesapeake Takes 2 From AAA Nine

Wins First in Ninth, but Second Is Easy.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westpoint, Va., June 30.—Chesapeake took a double-header from the AAA Club of Washington here today by scores of 4-3 and 8-0. In the first game, Venton Sutton bested Gatewood in a pitchers' duel which was won by Chesapeake after two were out in the ninth. Willie Powell singled and stole second, Bill Gwathmen scored Powell with the tying run with a single to center and then scored the winning run when John Coffee shot a single over second. Powell, Trexler and Coffee, with two hits each, led the locals in hitting, the first two getting triples.

In the second tilt, Jim Trexler and June Greene had little trouble with the visitors, shutting them out, 8-0. Chesapeake scored at will, getting 14 hits off the offerings of Lanaham; Waddey Stewart, Tom Wolfe and Jim Coffee getting two each. It was Chesapeake's nineteenth and twentieth straight wins of the current season. On Tuesday they go to Culpeper for a second game with the Valley League champs and then return here to play a double-header with St. Mary's Celtics on the Fourth of July.

Investigators Defeat Annapolis With Rally

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., June 30.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation nine slugged its way to a 9-to-6 victory over the Annapolis baseball club here today and thereby avenged a defeat suffered at the hands of the local outfit three weeks ago.

Annapolis used three pitchers in a vain effort to stop the onslaught by the Sleuths. Three home-run drives by Russell, Singman and Riley, all of the visitors, featured the battle. The home crew held a 5-to-3 lead until the sixth frame when three passes, two singles and Riley's circuit clout gave the visitors six of their runs.

Bobsey Turney Steals D. C. Net Show

Defeats Anna Dayett, 6-3, 7-5, to Gain Semifinals of Women's Tourney.

UTTERLY oblivious to a scorching June sun, Bobsey Turney stole the show yesterday at the Columbia Country Club as she racqueted her way to the semifinals of the District of Columbia women's tennis championships.

First to fall before her sizzling drives was sixth-seeded Anna Dayett, Baltimore Public Parks champion, who bowed by the tell-tale scores of 6—3, 7—5. Then after a short rest, Mrs. Turney locked racquets with the hard-hitting Californian, Dorothy Bergstrom, winning this time at 6—4, 6—1.

Sara Moore, City of Washington champion and third-seeded player, ran into a deal of a squall in the person of Grace Parker, of the Chevy Chase Club. It was only after the most heated battle of the tournament that the seeded star managed to eke out a 7—9, 6—3, 8—6 victory to gain a place in the quarter-finals.

In a match that should produce all that is best in competitive tennis Miss Moore is slated to oppose Clara Tabler this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Other interesting battles pit second-seeded Mary Cootes against Dorette Miller at 10:30 a. m. and Frances Bassett against Mary Ryan at 3:30 p. m.

Pirates Finally Beat Cubs With 17 Hits

Win 9-7 After 3 Straight Defeats by Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 30.—A 17-hit attack that routed three Cub pitchers salvaged a 9-to-7 victory for the Pittsburgh Pirates in the final game of their series before 10,400 persons today after they had been held to one run in the previous three games of the set.

A seventh-inning triple by Paul Waner off Charley Root, third of four Chicago pitchers, scored Woody Jensen, who had singled, with the deciding run after the Cubs had knocked out Bill Swift and rallied for five runs to create a 7-to-7 tie in the sixth.

Cy Blanton, Pirate freshman ace, making his first appearance in a fortnight due to an appendicitis attack, was the winning pitcher. It was his season's tenth victory.

Freitas' Pitching Wins For Reds Over Cards

Cincinnati, June 30 (AP).—Behind the four-hit pitching of Tony Freitas, the Cincinnati Reds swept their three-game series with the World Champion Cardinals by winning today, 5 to 2.

Freitas held the Cards hitless for six innings and retired in order the first 19 men to face him, although Orsatti got a base on balls in the fourth that was nullified by the Reds' seventy-third double play of the season.

29 Runs Aid Tigers To Take Twin Bill

Browns Hold Hats as Hits Fly Wide and Free.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 30.—The Detroit Tigers played havoc with Rogers Hornsby's crumbling hurling talent today as they hammered six pitchers for victories in both ends of a Sunday double-header with the league-trailing Browns. The Tigers took the first game, 18 to 1, and tapered off with an 11-to-6 triumph in the nightcap.

Mickey Cochrane's prime batsmen got off to an early start in the opener and knocked across eight tallies in the opening inning. The lone St. Louis tally came in the third.

New York Taps Brooklyn for Two Games

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 30.—Before 29,000 cash customers who formed the largest crowd to see a Brooklyn game this season, the League-leading Giants increased their hold on first place to 8¼ games by twice defeating the Dodgers. The scores were 7 to 4 and 5 to 4.

Mel Ott wa sthe batting star of the day. His four hits, including a home run, made him the outstanding figure of the 17-hit New York batting attack in the first game. In the second game, he hit a home run with two on to make possible the double victory. The two circuit drives brought his total for the year to 16.

Castleman started the first game for the Giants, but had to be removed in the sixth inning. Earnshaw was the victim, largely because Ott's short fly fell safe with two out and two on in the third inning to help the iGants to get three runs.

THE pennant-hopeful Pig 'n' Whistle team met with the left-handed pitching of lantern-jawed Bob Lyons yesterday with disastrous consequences, and dropped from the titular picture of the National City A League before the superior play of Murphy's 5 and 10 Store before a crowd of 4,000 on the South Ellipse. The final score was 7 to 2. The Murpuhymen face Blue Flame Valet Shop Sunday in the final for the first half Post Association title.

The Storemen threw most of their seven hits into one lofty inning, the second, in which they capitalized on Pitcher Francis Peffer's wildness to score five runs. Peffer invited trouble by bruising Brother Harding's ribs with one of his fast ones, and then walking Art Ware. Fred Thomas inserted a bunt, which he beat out for a hit. Eddie Dove then rapped out a stinging single to left. Lyons and Nau followed suit. By the time Peffer had retired the side, it was all over but the shouting.

Although touched for ten hits, three more than given by Peffer, also a southpaw, the veteran Lyons was well nigh invincible in tight spots.

On seevral occasions Bob literally "chawed" himself out of danger with the aid of a big wad of tobacco, which he masticated relentlessly.

Foster Mathias chalked up another victory as Capital Transit got away to a flying start by sidetracking Stansbury A. C., 7 to 5, in one of the opening games in the B league. Plaza Wine and Liquor Store bowed to the Warwicks, 10 to 4, in its debut, atnd Georgetown A. C. outlasted the heat and the District Grocery Store nine to win out, 14 to 13, in a see-saw ten-inning game.

Durham Black Sox Beat Richmond Colored Elks

In a pitchers' duel yesterday at Griffith Stadium, B. Barbee, of the Durham, N. C., Black Sox, nosed out a 1-0 victory over Bob Groom, of the Richmond colored Elks' team, aiding his own cause by striking out 11 and batting out the longest of the game's 5 hits, a triple to the left-field corner.

National A.A.U. Endangers Records

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Nebr., June 30.—With assurance of one of the finest fields of competitors in American track history, the outlook today for record-shattering performances in the national A. A. U. track and field championships here Wednesday and Thursday was considered exceptionally bright.

Herbert D. Gish, meet manager, said he expected more than 400 athletes would compete. Entries of more than 300 already have been received, and these include a big group rated as the class of their pet events.

World record holders, collegiate champions and Olympic winners will meet on a common level and with a common purpose. Many of the athletes will compete unattached. Others will work toward team championships. The Olympic Club of San Francisco alone will be represented by 25 men.

The sprint duel between Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette and Jesse Owens of Ohio State may peril records in both the 100 and 200-meter events. In the games at Milwaukee last year Metcalfe scored a double victory.

Many performers already are in Lincoln. They include Beard and Allen, Richard Voorhies, Louisiana javelin tosser; Jess Petty, Rice Institute discus thrower, and Mark Panther, Iowa javelin thrower.

The Wednesday program will be confined entirely to the junior events, leaving the senior championships for Thursday afternoon. All track events will be run on the meter basis.

CRANSTON HOWARD won a thrilling pitchers' duel from Lester Chewning yesterday as Cabin John advanced another step toward the first-half Post Association title in the Maryland County League by eking out a 4-3 victory over the Mount Rainier Grays in a stubbornly fought battle.

Mount Rainier A. C. subdued the Washington Clowns, 8 to 3, as Johnny Owen scattered eight hits with nice discretion. Pending the outcome of Sunday's Cabin John-Silver Spring Giants game and a decision on a disputed forfeit, the Mount Rainier A. C. has a possible chance of tying the leaders.

A single by Froman, Best's screeching triple and a lofty fly to deep center by Crown were the chief factors in Cabin John's last-minute victory over the Grays. Up to this time Chewning had pitched great ball, granting only two hits. Green led the hitting with a trio of safeties in five times at bat. Curley Smith's stickwork dominated Mount Rainier's scoring punch in its fray with the Clowns. Smith connected for a safe hit in each of his four official appearances at the plate.

Mr. Gallico Is Scared About His Forty Thousand Dollars

By Paul Gallico,
A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 30.—How would you like to find yourself with a forty-thousand or so dollar investment in an international amateur boxing show and wander over to the gymnasium where the Englishmen were scheduled to train, just two days before the bouts, and find one-half of your talent practically murdering one another with eight-ounce gloves on the hottest day of the year, many of them wearing heavy full-length sweatsuits? And to find their little coach with the gnarled ear, former English and world's bantamweight champion Joe Bowker, calmly say —"Come on, will you, Tim? 'It 'im. Let 'im 'ave it. 'It 'im a good one now!" This is exactly the position that this department found itself in this afternoon at Stillman's Gym where the British put on their final day of boxing in preparation for the international tourney Tuesday night in Yankee Stadium. For one moment I thought that the Englishmen had merely gone mad with the heat and were trying to exterminate one another. But it seems they were just 'aving a bit of a training go.

You must imagine the distracted promoter coming through the gym door, taking one look at the carnage and yelling for the watch. In great mental anguish he went over to Coach Bowker, of the British team, and said: "Gosh, Mr. Bowker, those are eight-ounce gloves those boys are using. Why, they are going to fight with eight-ounce gloves. Let me send out and get you some 16-ounce training gloves!"

No Head Gear.

"Oh, no," said Mr. Bowker, with devastating placidity, "if they're foighting with eight-ounce gloves let 'em get used to the feel of 'em. Come on, now, get hin there and let 'im 'ave a punch or two!"

At this point two of the English fighters collided head on and the promoter swooned. Upon coming to, he discovered that there had been no cuts or other permanent damage and the same two were still slugging away with the fighting gloves and apparently having a wonderful time.

Two heads clanked together again and the promoter began to weep softly and inquire whether the boys might at least wear headgear. Mr. Fowler said that the boys weren't used to that paraphernalia and that it was a good idea to toughen them up anyway, and besides they had none, and for that matter the boys were just having a light workout anyway and taking it easy, so there was nothing to worry about. At that moment Walter Lynch, first-string welterweight, let fly a right and sagged the knees of Jackson, a middleweight. Jackson stayed up, but the promoter went to the floor and took a count of 27 while the Englishmen looked at him in a puzzled way and inquired—"What's the matter with 'im? Ain't 'e never seen any fighting before?"

Nats Win, 8-7, On Bolton's Hit in 12th

zeri smacked that ball to Bluege to seal the fate of the Yanks.

Two Yankees were on base back in the sixth when Rolfe's ball disappeared into the right field bleachers close to the foul line. Donnelly immediately called it a foul ball. The entire Yankee team surged upon him, apparently to no avail. Then for some reason he started to walk toward the foul line pole in right field. Half way, he stopped suddenly, declared the ball had hit the pole, and was fair.

Then it was the Nats' turn to charge him. Earl Whitehill layed heavy hands on Donnelly as the arguing group gathered at first base but to no avail. His decision stuck and the Yanks had tied the game.

Puzzling Decision.

Why Donnelly walked toward the pole, none could quite understand. What he could learn by advancing half way to the bleachers was mystifying. He didn't consult his colleagues, but suddenly reversed his decision as if by divine command.

The Nats broke out with a rash of singles to take a 2-0 lead against Tamulis in the second inning. Schulte, Bolton, Whitehill and Stone produced the hits. They made it 3-0 in the third when Manush and Travis began the proceedings with singles.

The Yanks had wasted five hits off Whitehill in the first three innings, but Dickey's double and Tamulis' single with two out gave 'em a run in the fourth.

Tamulis' end came in the fifth. Myer hit through the box for a single in his nineteenth consecutive game and Travis pushed him to third with a double that drove Tamulis from the box. In came Jimmy Deshong to fan Travis for the second out, but Cliff Bolton blasted a single off Rolfe's upstretched glove and Myer and Travis ankled home to make it 5-1.

Yanks Tie Score, 5-5.

Then Umpire Charlie Donnelly swung into action in the sixth and the Yanks tied it at 5-5.

Pat Malone, who succeeded Deshong after the sixth, brought the Nats' attack to a dead halt, blanking 'em without a hit for two innings. But with one out in the ninth he encountered trouble.

Buddy Myer walked and sprinted to third on Manush's single to left with a rare bit of speed. With two strikes on Schulte, Myer and Manush started a double steal. Dickey's throw to Crosetti was too late to nip Manush and Myer dashed for home. Myer and the return threw to the plate reached Dickey at the same time and Myer crashed into the catcher as the ball carromed into the backstop.

Myer was safe, and Manush, rounding third, didn't stop. He, too, was home before Rolfe could get the ball back to Dickey who was rubbing an injured knee. The Nats had a 7-5 lead.

Whitehill Taken Out.

But not for long. In a last ditch stand the Yanks began to threaten. Whitehill walked Gehrig, first up and Harris waved him out of there. In came Jack Russell and Lazzeri knocked his first pitch to left field for a single. The bases were full after Russell walked Dickey and none as yet were out.

Selkirk batted for Hoag and Gehrig scored from third as Kuhel turned a grounder into a force play at second. Crosetti scored Lazzeri from third with a fly to Stone and it was now 7-7. There it remained when Travis threw out Malone.

In difficulty in the tenth when, with two out he walked Lazzeri intentionally to fill the bases, Russell escaped unscathed by retiring pinch-hitter Charley Ruffing on a fly to Schulte.

Eventually came the twelfth success for the Nats and frustration for the Yanks.

Tigers, Phillies Set Records In Hits

Swatting Spree Nets Each Great Harvest of Winning Runs.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The Detroit Tigers, charging up into third place in the American League standing and seriously threatening the league-leading Yankees and second-place Indians, staged a swatting splurge during the past week of a sort that is seldom equalled in any stretch of the major league campaign.

But when Mickey Cochrane's clouters wound up their efforts today by scoring 29 runs in a double-header victory over the Browns, they found the Phillies, second-division club in the National League, had done almost as well.

The Tigers slammed out six victories in their eight games of the week which ended today. They poled out 11 hits—the high mark for any week this season—scored 71 runs and with Hank Greenberg in the lead, collected 11 homers. Greenberg belted three to lift his reason's total to 23, six more than any major league rival.

The week's records of games won and lost, runs, hits, errors, opponents' runs and home runs follows:

Reunion by Telephone.

Come! Let's have a jolly reunion!
I'll get all the folks on the phone;
What fun to get all the relations—
When they are most happy alone!

Call up Uncle Abner in Jersey,
And get Cousins Jennie and Lew!
I love to establish those contacts—
And hear them bark savagely "Who?"

Ask Central to ring Sister Nellie,
Aunt Emma and Grandpappy Lee;
They'll welcome the call, I am certain—
As long as it's paid for by me!

Connect me with Aunt Arabella,
Aunt Susan and Old Uncle Matt . . .
Get Cousin Matilda and Ella—
I must hear 'em bellow, "What's that?"

Get all my nephews and nieces,
And also my wife's brother Sam!
You'd better explain who is calling—
In case they don't know who I am!

Then ring up my mother and tell her
I know that she's sad and alone;
And tell her I soon will be with her—
If nothing goes wrong with our phone!

And daddy! . . . Just tell him I'm calling;
I know he will anxiously clutch
The phone and with great apprehension
Inquire, "Hello, son . . . how MUCH?"

Can You Remember?

Away back when a millionaire could die and cut off the Government without a penny?

Alaskan Error.

("Alaskan pioneers, complaining to Washington, say they are practically stranded. As an instance of bungling, they say that 200 horses have arrived but instead of wagons they received 10 tons of paper towel." News item.)

We are Alaskan pioneers,
And, boy, are we disgusted!
It shows what happens any time
A distant bureau's trusted.

Two hundred horses just came in,
Some garden rakes and trowels,
But, needing wagons, we received
Ten tons of paper towels!

Received this ray of hope:
"RETURN THE HORSES, OUR MISTAKE; WE'RE RUSHING YOU SOME SOAP!"

Detour: Danger Ahead!

Braddock and Baer, Braddock and Baer,
If they never meet Louis, they'll never care.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Hear, Hear! — By Harry J. Tuthill

Yes sir, our Mr. Whiskers is walking on mighty thin ice in even hinting that our best friend grabbed a dispatch case full of important papers and...
Oh George, why do you keep bellowing that Oakdale is our best friend?
What Dad means, Mother, is that we know Hartford wouldn't...
Button? That reminds me....one moment.
What is it?
A gray button.
I found it at the door of that man's room. And I just realized that it's the same color as the suit Oakdale wears.
What was Oakdale doing at the door of that man's room? He must have been there. This button proves that...
Well...
Listen Jo, kindly do not talk so loud or... he heard you. Here he comes now.
